On the cover: The Pinis celebrate a quarter century

Richard and Wendy Pini were married in 1972, just hours after the Watergate break-in. On the occasion of their 25th anniversary, the couple takes a look back at what they've done both personally and professionally over the past 25 years, including the sketch (above) artist Wendy sent to publisher Richard in 1979.

Editorial

➽ On Page 24, you'll find the list of "nominees" for the Comics Buyer's Guide Fan Awards for 1996. These are the finalists, the top vote-getters in each category. They're not precisely nominees, because voters will not choose among them for the winner. (By the way, I assure you from past experience that that does, actually, make a difference in the final outcome.)

The finalists you'll find in this issue are the people and projects which received the highest number of votes in a CBG Fan Awards in transition. By next year, the only votes we'll count will be those made on an official CBG ballot (which will be included in all copies), no photocopies. So the votes will truly come from people who care enough about comics to subscribe to a weekly publication devoted to buying comics.

➽ Oh, and to add to the suspense of no one but our contributors, I'll note that the "nominees" among the CBG material that readers liked best are:

- Ask Mr. Silver Age by Craig Shutt
- But I Digress by Peter David
- Oh, So? from our readers' letters
- Point of View by Mark Evanier
- Tony's Tips! by Tony Isabella

Be with us in three issues. Mark your calendars for CBG #1233 (which ships June 17). Place orders with your retailers. Hot diggety dog! We'll reveal to the world your favorites in the field.

(Oh, and if you can work it into your schedule: Join us at Heroes Con in Charlotte, N.C., for the awards presentations. CBG columnist Peter David will be master of ceremonies, and there will be other notables there.)

➽ One of the pleasures of editing CBG is getting the chance to read fascinating material first. Or almost first. I do final proofreading after other editors rough-edit what's going in the issue. I've just finished editing the material Wendy and Richard Pini supplied for this celebration of their 25 years together. What they describe of the genesis of this coverage is spot-on; we had a lovely meal during which we chatted about such things as the days in which Wendy was Wendy Fletcher — and almost every male comics-fan teen-ager yearned to date her.

At that meal we also discussed one of the strange facts of the comics field: Wendy doesn't win awards because her material appeals to too many different types of people: fantasy fans, comics fans, adventure fans, science-fiction fans — a wide base for an audience, but one split into a number of equally devoted fan bases. It's weird, and I can't think offhand of another creator with that situation.

➽ Department of Important Corrections: On the cover (the cover, no less) and contents page of CBG #1229, the dates for this year's Comic-Con International: San Diego were given as July 18-20. It is my fault and mine alone (although, I add grumpily, Brent didn't notice it when we took our final look at the layout).

The actual dates for this year's Comic-Con International: San Diego are July 17-20. (The dates were correct in the story itself.)

Mark your calendar. Better yet, come to the year's focal event. See you at the CBG table!

(Thanks to Greg Loescher for spotting the error the second the printed issue reached his office. Wish I'd spotted it that quickly!)

➽ For the Record Department: Joyce Greenholdt and I went to see Chasing Amy (in part, I admit, to see our names in huge letters on a theater screen) and got lots of laughs. (See Page 42, and I should add that — in both language and subject matter — the film is not intended for children.) When I discussed the movie with someone (can't remember who it was, doggone it), we fell into a debate about some wild comics aspects, with the other person saying he thought some things were too far-fetched.

What struck me as remarkable about the statement was that it was precisely those things that had struck Joyce and me as among the touches that were most true to the industry. We're in a far-fetched business, folks.

Sotheby's annual comics auction is June 13-14

Key Golden and Silver Age comics to be sold

Sotheby's seventh annual sale of comic books and comic art will take place in New York June 13 at 2 p.m. and June 14 at 10:15 a.m. and 2 p.m. The sale comprises more than 700 lots, and the company said it "features an unprecedented array of Golden Age comic books, including nearly every major title and significant runs of the major comics, original Golden Age artwork which has never before surfaced at auction, and a superb offering of early newspaper strip art."

Property from several noted collections will be offered, including a group of Golden Age comic books from the collection of Dr. Jerry Buss, Golden and Silver Age comics from the collection of a First Fandom Member, a group of unrestored comics from an institutional collection, and a collection of Mile High copies. Highlights of the auction will be on public exhibition at Sotheby's Beverly Hills gallery from June 4 to 6 and at Sotheby's New York gallery from June 10 to 13.

Golden and Silver Age comics

Sotheby's said its Lot 122, Detective Comics #27, which featured the first appearance of Batman, is considered the finest unrestored copy ever offered for public sale (estimated value $40-60,000).

Lot 237 is an unrestored copy of Action Comics #1 which the company said has remained with its original owner since it was purchased from the newsstand in 1938 (est. $15-25,000).

Also scheduled for the auction is a group of 4000 comic books from the private collection of Dr. Jerry Buss, owner of the Los Angeles Lakers basketball team. The group features significant runs of major Golden Age titles, including Action Comics (#1-100), Superman (#1-100), Batman (#1-100), Detective Comics (#1 and #27-127), World's Finest Comics (#1-100), Green Lantern (#1-100), All-American Comics (#1-100), and All Star Comics (#1-100).

Sotheby's announced that the star of the Buss collection is "an exceptional copy of Action Comics #1, June 1938, which has the least restoration of any Action Comics #1 brought to Sotheby's in five years" (Lot 361; est. $40-50,000). Other highlights include Batman #1, Spring 1940 (Lot 92; est. $6-10,000); Detective Comics #1 (which Sotheby's called "the rarest of all Golden Age comics and the very first comics title to run original stories") (Lot 109; est. $22-25,000); and Superman #1, Summer 1939, "in the finest condition ever auctioned at Sotheby's" (Lot 161; est. $10-15,000).

The sale includes the collection of a First Fandom Member who began to buy seriously in the early 1960s and made conscious efforts to obtain the rarest and most sought-after Golden Age and Silver Age comics of the "early" collecting era. Highlights include All-American Comics #25 from The Mile High/Edgar Church Collection (Lot 174; est. $10-15,000); and Adventure Comics #40 (lot 173; est. $7-10,000). Flash Comics #1, "the finest condition copy Sotheby's has ever offered, represents the origin and the first appearance for both The Flash and Hawkman, two of the most popular and long-running of DC Comic's super-hero characters" (Lot 178; est. $8-12,000). All

Toy Biz aligns with Marvel bondholders

By Michael Dean

Toy Biz has withdrawn from a reorganization plan proposed by Marvel Entertainment Inc. and reached an agreement with Marvel bondholders for a revised plan. Marvel and Toy Biz would still merge to form a new company, as called for by the Marvel Entertainment reorganization plan, but, under the new plan, the merger would take place on the bondholders' terms.

The new proposal, which is the first time the bondholders have incorporated Toy Biz into their reorganization plans for Marvel, calls for the two companies to become separate subsidiaries of a new holding company. Toy Biz shareholders would receive 40% of the capital stock of the holding company, while Marvel shareholders (including the Marvel bondholders in their role as pledgees of Marvel stock) would receive 60% of the new company's stock.

Marvel would continue to be liable for its current secured debts. The bondholder committee has proposed to raise $300 million through a rights offering to help pay Marvel's debt. Marvel's lender banks would also receive the assets of Marvel's Fleer/SkyBox and Panini sticker units. The May 22 New York Times reported the lender banks have expressed dissatisfaction with the bondholders' plan, objecting that it would fall too far short of satisfying Marvel's approximately $700 million debt.

In the meantime Judge Roderick McKelvie of the U.S. District Court in Delaware issued a temporary stay May 21 that prevented the Marvel bondholder committee from replacing Marvel's board of directors with the bondholders' own appointees. A hearing on the issue was scheduled for May 27.

Following Toy Biz's withdrawal from its original letter of intent to merge with Marvel, Marvel Entertainment said it was going ahead with plans to put Marvel up for auction to the highest bidder. Marvel Entertainment said it would file a revised plan of reorganization.

A copy of Action Comics #1 and the original cover art for Superman #17 are among the more than 700 lots scheduled to be auctioned at Sothebys June 13 and 14.

(From Page 6)

Star Comics #8 features the origin and first appearance of Wonder Woman and is quite rare (Lot 209; est. $5-7000). And Showcase #4 is regarded by many as marking the start of the Silver Age (Lot 446; est. $10-15,000).

A group of 80 unrestored comic books from an institutional collection includes Superman #1-20 and Batman #2-20.

Also included are such issues as Marvel Comics #1-4, from the Lamont Larson collection (Lots 43-45; #1, est. $30-50,000; #2, est. $7-10,000; #3, est. $3-5,000; #4, est. $2-3000). Among the Mile High issues offered are Blue Beetle #1-5 (Lot 47; est. $7-10,000).

Original Golden Age art

The sale includes two pieces of World War II DC cover art; the items were a gift in 1944 from Max Gaines, the creator of the 10¢ comic book. Fred Ray's original art for the cover of Superman #17 is, according to Sotheby's, the earliest known surviving example of a Superman comic-book cover to appear at public auction (Lot 286; est. $20-40,000). The rare art, one of the first covers produced shortly after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, features a classic World War II propaganda theme depicting the "Man of Tomorrow" holding up Adolph Hitler and Tojo. The cover was also used later on a Superman War Bond promotional poster.

The original art for the cover of Batman #12 is, according to Sotheby's, the earliest known original art for a Batman cover ever to surface (Lot 89; est. $15-25,000). It was one of the first covers to feature the Dynamic Duo supporting the "War Savings Bond and Stamps" effort of World War II. It was pencilled by Fred Ray and inked by Jerry Robinson and represents the artistic duo's last collaborative Batman cover art.

Early original newspaper-strip art

Sotheby's said that the Alex Raymond Flash Gordon art for Feb. 10, 1935, "is the most outstanding and scarce Flash Gordon page ever to come to auction (Lot 63; est. $15-25,000). It is among only nine full-page Flash Gordon Sundays ever done in this format."

A Dingbat Family daily from January 1912 includes, said Sotheby's, "the finest and earliest example of George Herriman's Krazy Kat ever offered at auction (Lot 218; est. $10-15,000). Krazy Kat was originally developed from June of 1910 as a bottom strip to Dingbat Family."

An early Hal Foster Prince Valiant Sunday (May 31, 1942) "is an exceptional Sunday page from an early year during the strip's history and is titled 'Lady Anne's Night Ride' (Lot 108; est. $7-10,000)."

The Walt Kelly original Pogo Sunday strip for Oct. 26, 1952, has on its reverse a fully developed idea for a new feature titled Double-O which was never produced (Lot 233; est. $2-4,000).

The art for the Peanuts daily for Nov. 24, 1950, is from the second month that Charles Schulz' comic strip appeared in newspapers (Lot 266; est. $3-5000).

Sotheby's said E.C. Segar's Sunday page of Thimble Theater for Dec. 21, 1930, is the earliest known Sunday page discovered with the matching topper (Lot 182; est. $10-15,000). "This remarkable examples features the rare Sappo topper, as well as Popeye involved in his favorite activity — fighting."

Additional highlights

Following the success last June of Robert Crumb art from the collection of Didier Moiselet, this sale will feature a cluster of Crumb art, including the original art for the five-page "That's Life" from The Comics Revue #3 (Lot 612; est. $35-45,000).

World Trade Center is site of Comic Book Extravaganza and New York Toy Festival June 7 and 8

Two types of collector conventions join forces June 7 and 8 at the Marriott World Trade Center in New York City, when the Comic Book Extravaganza and New York Toy Festival opens. One of the biggest comics show in New York City, the event draws fans from all over the U.S., as well as Sweden, England, Brazil, Ireland, and Canada.

Among the guests who have confirmed their appearances are Greg and Tim Hildebrandt, Mart Nodell, Evan Dorkin, Peter Kuper, Rick Parker, Sarah Dyer, Kaz, Carol Lay, and Val Semeiks. Joe Kubert is also scheduled to make a rare convention appearance at the show.

Designers and representatives from Toy Biz will be on hand Saturday with previews of action figures. Toy Biz is also contributing action figures for giveaways.

McFarlane Toys will be present Sunday with Spawn comics and new Kiss toys. The New York City debut of Spawn animation and movie footage are also scheduled. The Ash action figure prototype will be on display from Palisades Toys. Fans of Omega Man will get to see a prototype figure by creator Alonzo Washington. Panel discussions will cover such topics as self-publishing, the alternative scene, and toys that are popular with collectors.

The show's scheduled hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission, which includes both the toy show and the comics convention, is $10 per day or $15 for a two-day pass. For conventioneers, there are discount rates for adjacent parking and accommodations at the Marriott. For hotel reservations, call (212) 938-9100. For further information about the show, call (718) 441-9868.

Market Guide

By Michael Dean

A comics seller has no trouble selling the new JLA. A comics buyer keeps "headlights" in view.

Back issues:

Alan Giroux, All about Books and Comics, 517 E. Camelback Rd., Phoenix, AZ 85012.

Business has "stabilized" at All about Books and Comics, according to Giroux.

In Golden Age titles, Giroux said his customers are looking for DCs and "Good Girl" art. Demand has dropped, however, for Golden Age "funny animal" comics, including Looney Tunes and duck titles.

In Silver Age titles, Giroux described 10¢ DCs as "hot." Anything by Jack Kirby sells well for Giroux, and "first-stage" Marvels in general are popular. Journey into Mystery stands out as "especially hot," said Giroux. Marvels launched or reintroduced later in the Silver Age, including Silver Surfer and Captain America, are declining in popularity among Giroux' customers.

In modern titles, Giroux' comment on the new Mad: "Yeesh!" Alfred E.'s make-over has not clicked with customers at All about Books and Comics. Nor has DC's Helix line of science-fiction titles. On the other hand, in high or increasing demand are Dale Keown's Pitt, the new JLA, Poison Elves, and any Linsner title, said Giroux.

Mark Fischler, Gotham Taboo Collectibles, 606 Rt.6, Lake Mahopac, NY 10541.

Fischler operates a mail-order business but said he is doing more buying than selling these days. As a seller, Fischler said he recently sold a Near Mint run of Amazing Spider-Man in order to focus on collecting pre-Code comics. "Silver Age is dead," he said.

As a buyer, Fischler looks primarily for high-grade Golden Age titles and he said he is not afraid to spend money. "If I really was hot for a title, I'm not sure if another $500 would make a difference," he said. "You have to follow the serious money where it's going."

As a newcomer to comics collecting, however, Fischler said he recognizes that there are limits to what he can acquire. "If you're new to comics collecting, you're not going to be able to do a run as easily, if at all, but, if you get into a thematic collection, that's doable."

As he learned the history of the imposition of the Comics Code, Fischler said he "turned against Code-approved comics" and began focusing on pre-Code titles, with an emphasis on "headlight" covers.

Fischler's advice to new collectors is to build collections around specific "themes" and to have the Gerber Photo-Journal Guide to Comic Books on hand to identify which covers reflect those themes.

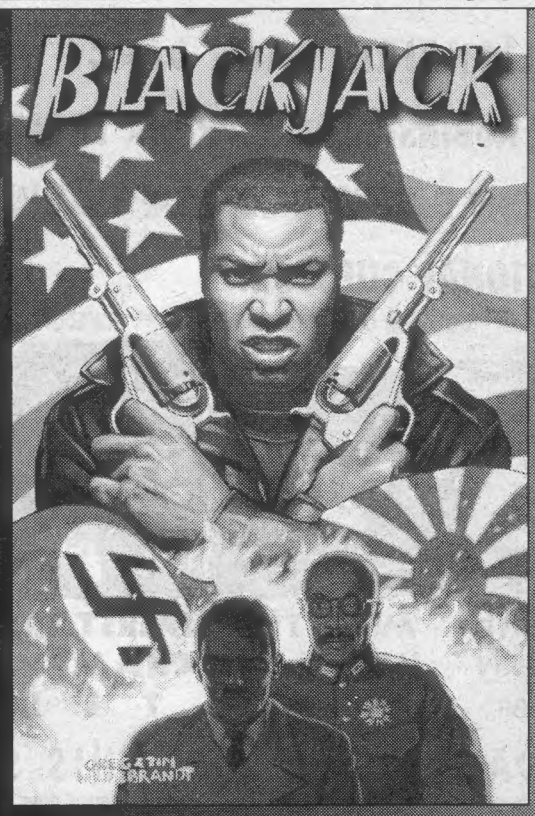
Original art:

At All about Books and Comics, demand is high for Golden Age original art andany art by Marc Silvestri.

Noteworthy purchases:

Mark Fischler reported the following recent purchases: Amazing Fantasy #15 in Near Mint for $21,000 plus trade, Suspense Comics #3 (featuring a Schomburg bondage cover) for $18,000, a Mile High copy of All Top Comics #8 (featuring a Kamen "Good Girl" bondage cover with a racial theme) in Near Mint for $3900, Thun'da #1 in Near Mint + (featuring Frazetta art and a "headlights" cover) for $2250, Jungle Girl #1 (featuring what may be the first comic-book bondage cover) in Near Mint for $680, a White Mountain copy of Weird Tales of the Future #3 (with Wolverton art) for $2000, Brenda Starr Vol. 1 #2 in Very Fine + for $600, Suspense Comics #11 in Very Fine - (featuring an L.B. Cole devil cover) for $1800, Suspense Comics #12 in Fine/Very Fine for $1100, Captain Marvel Adventures #18 (introducing Mary Marvel) in Near Mint for $2000, Phantom Lady #16 in Very Fine for $1300, Exciting Comics #59 in Very Fine for $500, Intimate Confessions in Fine for $400, An Earthman on Venus in Fine for $310, Suspense Comics #4 in Very Good/Fine for $1000, Underworld True Crime Stories #2 (referenced in Seduction of the Innocent) in Very Fine for $200, Great Comics #3 (with devil-Hitler cover) in Very Good for $1000, Suspense Comics #7 in Fine for $700, Suspense Comics #1 in Good for $540, Suspense Comics #2 in Fine for $650, Suspense Comics #8 in Very Good for $650, Suspense Comics #9 in Fine for $500, Suspense Comics #10 in Very Good for $500, Annie Oakley #1 in Near Mint for $300, and Wanted #50 in Very Fine for $185.

2 exciting series packed with action, adventure and world travel. . . both from DARK ANGEL PRODUCTIONS



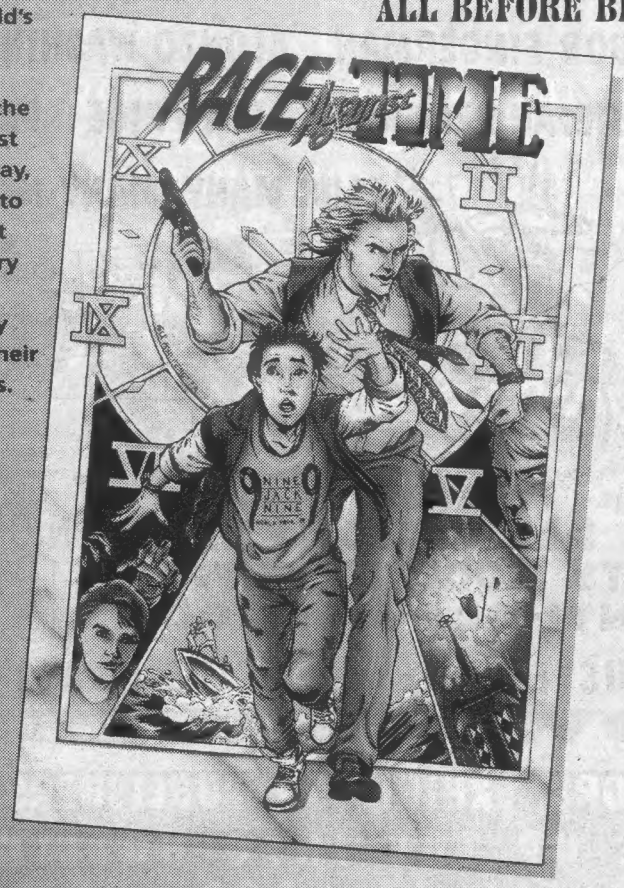
One of the world's best soldiers of fortune is up against one of the world's mightiest armies. Arron Day, Blackjack, goes to Japan to protect a noted dignitary from a secret order of military overlords and their deadly assassins. With the fires of World War II beginning to ignite, Japan is boiling—and Arron is about to get burned.

Created and written by Alex Simmons

With brilliant cover art by TIM & GREG HILDEBRANDT

Part one of a four part, bi-monthly, full-color mini series—available now!

BOMBS, GOONS, DEATH TRAPS— ALL BEFORE BEDTIME?



STEPHEN LANE is an average twelve-year old boy spending the weekend with his quiet, book reading, boring, Uncle Richard. Suddenly, mad professors, weird thugs, and world conquerors are coming out of the wood work. Surprisingly, Uncle Richard is right at home battling the fiends, but Stephen is trying hard not to lose his lunch, or his life. For him, the hardest part isn't the non-stop globe-trotting, or avoiding death dealing devices, it's getting back home . . . before his parents find out!

Book one written by Alex Simmons

With art by Jamal Igle & Ravil Lopez

Part one of a three part, bi-monthly, full-color mini series—Coming in June!

PRESERVATION and STORAGE PRODUCTS by GERBER

Buy From THE SOURCE, 'The One-Stop Shop'

Why Are Our Prices so Low?

1. We invented the first Mylar® sealed sleeves in 1979.
2. Our 1985 patent is used by all our competitors.
3. Our patented equipment is sold and used world-wide, including two machines purchased by the Library of Congress.
4. We build all our own equipment. We do not buy from others. We keep the highest producing machines for ourselves & sell the rest.
5. We have patents or patents pending on many of our unique products.
6. Most importantly, our business logic is NOT to sell as high as the traffic will bear; but as low as possible to make our products available to more collectors. We take our Company Slogan seriously.

As I lay in a hospital bed for 17 days, wondering if I was going to pull through — unknown to me, for part of that same time, my best friend was in a hospital in Long Island.

About eight years ago, I had moved from Long Island to take care of my mother (she and my father moved to North Carolina), who wasn't doing so well since my father died. I left behind many things, including my best friend, Nick Kalogeras. Nick was the biggest Spider-Man fan I ever knew. We first met during a jiu jitsu class, and he worked in what was then for me the local comic-book store. (The Incredible Pulp of Baldwin, N.Y. Hello, Larry!) We became friends. Our favorite outings came when there was a comic-book convention in New York City (an hour away by train on the Babylon branch) to be followed by a kung fu triple feature. I remember asking Nick to lend me some money at the convention for a Charlton Blue Beetle comic book so I'd have enough left over for us to see his favorite Sonny Chiba movie. Ah, memories.

When I was in the hospital, I missed Christmas Eve, Christmas, my birthday, New Year's Eve, and New Year's Day, among many other days. I didn't find out — or, to be more precise, I wasn't told — that my best friend had died in the hospital the day before my birthday. My family knew but didn't tell me for about a month, for fear I didn't have enough strength to know that Nick had died Dec. 26. Apparently, he had collapsed a week before from a stroke and had lapsed into a coma he never came out of. Since I was still in the hospital for a couple of weeks after his death, my family was probably right not to tell me. At that point such news would have probably killed me. (My survival was a near thing on a couple of occasions.) It was hard enough to take it when I finally did learn it.

Nick Kalogeras is survived by his mother, his wife, and his two children. His death was sudden and unexpected, whereas I was ill off and on throughout 1996. Who would have guessed I would live and Nick would not? If I had been in a position to do so, I would have died in his place. Thanks to my own misfortunes, I cannot even help out his family financially. If anyone else is inclined to help his wife, her address is: Stephanie Kalogeras, 9 Tarry Lane, Levittown, NY 11756. She can't pay the medical bills with Nick's Spider-Man collection.

To my old buddy, Nick Kalogeras: We had too few years together before I moved, and we only visited once since then, but I always remembered our adventures together. Goodbye, my friend!

There are three events mentioned in Tony's Tips that have dovetailed with my life recently. I wasn't sure how to organize this letter, so I opted for the tried-and-true method of chronological order.

First, I am esctactic to know that I share a dubious honor with the creator of Tickle Me Elmo. We have both been checked out by the FBI during the Unabomber investigations. I found out through a friend whose house I take care of when he and his wife are out of town. He got a call from the local police telling him to contact the Unabomber task force. Seems some neighbor of his reported to the police and the FBI that I fit the description. My friend used to be an officer in town, and I grew up here, so the local police had dismissed it at the time.

For the record, I kind of look like Theodore Kaczynski, if you get a really warped funhouse mirror and I haven't shaved for a few weeks. Also, my chemical and electronics expertise is almost nil — although I was learning how to use a computer at the time. So, five to six months after the report, the FBI gets around to talking to my friend. After he tells them my name, they tell him my life history, which he already knew. Bottom line for him was to point out that I was investigated by the California Justice Department in order to get my teaching credential and that they should check out that report. Needless to say, I never heard from them.

Tony touches my life a second time. I received the second part of the Medina Library saga the same day that our local news was covering a similar controversy in Sacramento (our nearby metropolis). Seems at least one person is upset over the fact that people have access to the Internet through the city library. His claim is that it is irresponsible to have R- and X-rated stuff on the Internet and the library to have access. The library spokesperson stated that blocking software is not effective and the library doesn't plan to change policy. I haven't seen the follow-up on this yet.

The last is the hardest to write. As I type this, Tony's column about Kim Yale has not yet appeared in CBG. Originally Tony wrote it, I believe, so that Kim could read it. It was posted on the Internet the day the news was broken that Kim Yale had passed on. I never met Kim Yale or John Ostrander. She had written some comics, but (because of personal reasons) they were during a time when I wasn't paying attention.

I became familiar with her through her articles here in CBG. She impressed me as courageous, honest, intelligent, and even ornery at times. I would look up her columns when they appeared and had been gladdened when the news was optimistic about her cancer. Like Don, she touched me through this paper and I will miss her. To John Ostrander, I'd like to say that I share a small part of your grief and loss.

Thanks for letting me get this stuff out of my head.

• Unemployment among comics professionals: Yes, it's sad that so many professionals in the industry are losing their jobs, but why should our industry be more exempt than any other from the economic forces reshaping our national economy? My sympathy for people is mitigated by the following two factors: a) I don't know any of these people personally, and b) I'm one of them, albeit in another field.

Since March 1995 I have been unexpectedly unemployed for 10 months and underemployed for an additional 10 months. I am (or was) an underwriting manager specializing in the field of professional liability insurance. I am currently working as a temporary worker performing word-processing duties. This is not a situation I expected when we decided to relocate back to the greater New York metropolitan region, still the center of the insurance industry. You roll with the punches and play the hand you're dealt (he said, with considerable anger and bitterness).

• Mike Parobeck and Curt Swan's deaths: On the other hand, I find myself filled with sadness at the deaths of these two fine men, strangely related by their work despite their difference in age.

Despite my enjoyment of DC's refreshing 1980s "relaunch" of Superman (due to the creative efforts of John Byrne, Marv Wolfman, Jerry Ordway, Mike Carlin, et al.), the definitive Superman to me will always be the character immortalized in Alan Moore's "Whatever Happened to the Man of Tomorrow" — a powerful but somewhat tragic figure, filled with the sadness of his alien origins, his sense of being "the last son of Krypton," of being different; the angst of being unable to save from death either his biological Kryptonian parents or his adoptive earthly parents; and the great sense of responsibility he felt from his upbringing and the gift of his super-powers, which were simultaneously a great joy and a great burden.

The visual aspect of his character was definitively created for me by the wonderful art of Curt Swan, which reached its artistic apogee under the wonderful inking of Murphy Anderson, resulting in the team of "Swanderson." I wish I had told Swan of this. I had an opportunity to share this with him a number of years ago, when DC celebrated Superman's "birthday." Swan was at a table signing autographs for various fans and well-wishers. I went over to chat, but the large crowd around him was intimidating, and this, combined with my own natural reluctance to disturb celebrities, discouraged me from approaching. Well, many other people seem to feel the same, and it sounds as though the importance of Swan's work in shaping our character and influencing our lives was communicated to him before his death. I hope that our collective expressions of grief and appreciation has been of some consolation to his family.

Even more untimely was the death of Mike Parobeck, who will never have the chance to create the great body of work, to leave the kind of legacy, as Curt Swan. Parobeck's art was reminiscent of the work of DC's super-hero titles of the 1940s in its deliberate "cartoon" style and was filled with the joys as well as responsibilities of having super-powers. Both men taught us to fly, the greatest compliment that can be paid to works in this genre, and both will be dearly missed.

• Television cartoons: Maybe endless repeats are fine for younger viewers, but I continuously start watching a good cartoon series (Batman, X-Men, Spider-Man, Gargoyles) only to end up losing interest due to a continuous onslaught of repeats, especially in their later seasons. Yes, I can and do time-shift using my VCR, but I don't like wearing out blank tapes by repeatedly taping over the same spot, and, frankly, it's not worth the time and energy. There are too many alternatives vying for my limited time.

• At last I have encountered someone whose collection methods mirror my own. I have long since given up the attempt at keeping my collection in any kind of systematic order. What adult has the time to waste spending hours weekly or monthly putting comic books in order; finding the correct box, then the correct title, etc.?

So, like my fellow CBG reader whose name I did not write down, I simply place my comics in a box, with no regard for any order save approximate chronology: that is to say, the most recently read comics are toward the front of the box. But my fellow reader has given me an idea. I'm going to try making a list of my comics as I put them in the box and numbering the box, so that I will at least have a list of the contents of each box and can locate my comics. Too bad there are so many uncataloged boxes. Oh, well, something to do in my eventual retirement.

• Am I the only one terribly disappointed by Kingdom Come? I'm a huge fan of Mark Waid's writing: The Flash and Impulse are two of the best four (Aquaman and Untold Tales of Spider-Man being the other two) super-hero titles currently being published on a regular, monthly schedule. Despite the publicity hype, I wasn't expecting a work of the quality of The Dark Knight Returns or Watchmen, but I was looking forward to a work of the level and excitement of Marvels. I was terribly disappointed.

Alex Ross' painted artwork is gorgeous, but allegory is a dangerous thing to indulge in, because the characters can easily become objects rather than fictional people we sympathize with

THE CONVENT OF HELL
Noe & Barreiro
A convent in Spain. Nuns going about their routine in the name of God. But all is not quite as it seems. There are cracks on the surface. Some nuns seem to harbor secret lusts for each other. Then's there's an accident in the cellar revealing a very old condemned door found on no plan. One of the less holy nuns has a satanic nightmare about it. She decides to find out. What she unleashes is an unholy bedlam of depravity and lust! Beautifully painted and full of very raw sexual energy!
8½x11, 64pp., full color trade pb.: $12.95

and care about. Many actions (such as Wonder Woman being thrown out of Paradise Island for not being militant enough in her duties) seem contrivances of the plot rather than actions which grow out of history. The conversation between Superman and Wonder Woman at the beginning of Book Three sounded ludicrous. For a successful mythic approach to the super-hero genre, I strongly recommend digging up back issues of Miracleman.

• Maggie, as a fan of old-time radio, have you seen a splendid television series on the American Movie Channel called Remember WENN? It is about the trials and tribulations of the staff of a fictional radio station, WENN, during the 1940s. One particularly clever and whimsical episode concerned a successful attempt to placate two wildly different sponsors, one of whom wanted an action-adventure program while the other wanted an educational program, by adapting one of Shakespeare's plays (Hamlet, I think) to a different setting.

Another episode concerned the difficulties that ensued when a sponsor discovered that one of the station's most popular new actors was a "colored" man. The earlier episodes were more clever and moving than the later ones, when a new station manager interested mostly in profits resulted in too many one-gag scripts (outwitting the new manager so that quality triumphed over the needs of advertising), but, all in all, it is one heck of a great show, and anyone who is enchanted by old-time radio should try to catch it.

The re-release of the Star Wars trilogy has brought the Star Wars vs. Star Trek debate back into the spotlight once again. Since 1977, fans of both sagas have continued to argue over which space epic was the more interesting and the more creative of the two, the space fantasy of George Lucas or the optimistic future world of Gene Roddenberry? Twenty years ago, I would have argued that both Star Wars and Star Trek have different things going for them that could appeal to people on many different levels. They were like apples and oranges, and it was next to impossible to pick one over the other.

But times change, and viewpoints that made sense two decades ago might not be valid today. So I took a long look at both Star Wars and Star Trek again, and this time I noticed that things had changed in a large way. Star Wars has only gotten better with age, and, because George Lucas has always maintained such tight creative control over it, the movies haven't been turned into a "for profit by ruining the quality" operation that Star Trek has become. When Gene Roddenberry died in 1991, Star Trek was quickly turned into a million-dollar operation that puts out new television shows solely for the purpose of making money.

Gone are the hope and sense of wonder that Roddenberry established in the original Star Trek television series, to be replaced by new shows where things are a lot darker, and the theme of Us vs. Them takes center stage.

So I've come to my own decision that, creatively speaking, Star Wars is doing a lot better than Star Trek, my days as a Star Trek fan are over, and I will just have to be satisfied with the total number of stories (79 live-action shows, 22 animated episodes, and six motion pictures) that the original Star Trek series told and move to that arena of the science-fiction universe where George Lucas and Steven Spielberg are working on movie projects like The Lost World and upcoming new Star Wars movies.

I've spent some time thinking about how to define all of the various eras of comic-book publishing and have come to a couple of conclusions. One is that the comic-book community will never likely reach a consensus over this issue, and the other is that we probably really don't need to do this.

The Golden and Silver Ages of comics seemed easy to define. There are specific issues which we can point to that define the beginning and end of the Golden Age and the beginning of the Silver Age.

However, after that it starts to become murky. I don't think that there is even any consensus over when exactly the Silver Age ended. Trying to define ages over about the past 20 years seems like an even more difficult task. There are times when there were significantly different simultaneous trends. Trying to fit all of this into neat, well-defined categories really ignores the complexities of the situations.

Other popular media have had their golden ages. There have been the golden ages of radio, movies, and television. However, I rarely hear about silver or any other ages for those other media. I don't think that comic books really need to have any ages other than the golden and silver ages.

I subscribe to CBG. I don't get the chance to read much else in the way of newspapers, magazines, or books. Nor would I want the opportunity to read about most of today's current events. I design security systems and techniques for homes and businesses, sometimes after an event which is devastating. After a long week, when CBG gets to my door, I sit, lay, or sprawl and enjoy. Thanks for giving me something to look forward to.

I would like to nominate Solar #2 as the starting point of the current age of comics. I really can't think of a good name, but my reasons for choosing this comic book are clear.

The first recognized age of comics, aside from those sequential drawings on cave walls, has been identified as the Platinum Age. Starting with the appearance of The Yellow Kid, this age is probably the most important and useful to our understanding of the appeal that pictures and words together generate.

The second great age of comics is known as the Golden Age and begins with that most famous edition, Action Comics #1. Aside from the technicality of house ads and prototypes, this is the first appearance of Superman (my hero) and the beginning of an explosion that saw huge numbers of issues and companies.

The third shining age of comic books begins with Showcase #4 and the reappearance, in an updated mode, of one of Superman's pals, The Flash. With his speed, The Flash started an era of excitement and humanity unmatched in this or any other field of publishing since monks put quill to ink.

And now, the fourth age. Skipping all interim and burnished ages, the current age of comic books is the fourth and just-as-great age in this fun and important industry. Published in 1991 with a cover date of October '91, Solar #2 is the first current-age appearance of a Silver Age hero named Doctor Solar. Since all the other ages are pegged to a character's appearance, it gives us a foundation in choice for this comic book to usher in the current age. No other age started with creatures jumping ship; no other milestone is noted as sales of comics or coloring technique or most blood-and-guts.

Solar #2 not only gives a character start to this age we are slogging through now, but also allows us to point to a specific issue and say "Everything was happening at one time, and this is where we began." Rampant speculation followed this comic book and its cousins, Image's genesis erupted at this time, independents took root and grew to redwoodian heights, and good and bad girls took off and put on. This is it. Solar #2 is the comic book that started perhaps the most entertaining and broad presentation in the history of the comics industry.

Despite the nagging problems and sales figures and blah blah blah, this is the time of the future. This is the age of discovery in an industry unlike any other, an industry that appeals to anyone who takes the time to look and read. All of us reading this now, all of those we talk to and relate to about comic books and the characters we love: We are all in an age of excellence. Let's appreciate what we have. Spread the good word, with a comic book. Now, let's think of a name.

I find the recent changes in the Superman comics to be an abomination.

My feeling is that the quality of the Superman line has been in steady decline since late 1993. DC's response to this is to essentially blame the character. I would have to imagine that it would be a real challenge to keep writing fresh stories for the Man of Steel, but substantially altering the concept seems like cheating to me. As evidenced by Mark Waid and Paul Dini, there are still a lot of cool stories to be told about Superman.

This is a cheap way to make a few bucks at the expense of long-term readers. The vultures picking up this comic book will be gone six months from now, and so will I.

Mike Carlin's comments that Superman is owned by DC Comics is factually accurate but totally ignores the fact that Superman is an American myth. Myths transcend corporate ownership. If these guys don't understand their own characters or care for them, how do they expect us to?

My response was to dump all my in-continuity Superman comics back to Superman #75.

Superman is better off dead.

Patrick Ross

Death in the world of super-heroes always seems to have a ephemeral feeling to it. The list of those who have had revolving doors installed on their cemetery plots reads like a Who's Who of the DC and Marvel universes: Superman, Reed Richards, Punisher, John Constantine, Deathstroke, etc. You name the character, major or minor, hero or villain, and they have undoubtedly bought (or, more appropriately, leased) the farm at one time or another. With this thought in mind, I've put together a list of the outstanding *un*resurrected deaths in the DC universe. (I don't feel that my reading habits allow me to do justice to the deaths in the Marvel or other comic-book universes. Perhaps someone else can produce similar lists for the characters of other companies.)

[Spoiler Warning: See preceding paragraph.]

• Silver Age Flash/Barry Allen — sacrificed himself to save the universe during Crisis on Infinite Earths #8. This is a biggie. The writers of Flash, notably Mark Waid, regard the death of Barry Allen as sacred. I agree. Barry's death was the first major super-hero death in the DC universe in the first major crossover in the DC universe. A resurrection would certainly reduce the dramatic impact of that storyline. Also, Barry has been dead for more than 10 years (a super-hero record, perhaps?) and Wally West, his predecessor, has gained wide acceptance. However, the lack of a body and the mystical nature of the Speed Force from which all DC speedsters derive their powers makes anything possible. Probability of resurrection: 20%.

• Silver Age Green Lantern/Parallax/Hal Jordan — sacrificed himself to restore the sun during Final Night #4. Another biggie. This death ranks right up there with Barry Allen's passing. Don't expect Hal's prompt resurrection. DC finally figured out a way for this hero to exit gracefully after the Parallax debacle, and I don't believe that it will screw up the event any time soon. Probability of resurrection: 15%.

• Silver Age Green Arrow/Oliver Queen — sacrificed himself to save Metropolis from a terrorist bomb in Green Arrow #101. Last of the big three from the Justice League roster to be pushing up daisies. This one is a bit iffy. First, no body was recovered. Second, the new Green Arrow, Connor Hawke, does not appear to have improved sales of the title. Third, an upcoming storyline hints at the return of Ollie. However, DC's concerted effort to push out the old heroes in favor of the younger crowd would suggest that Ollie's death may be as permanent as those of Hal Jordan and Barry Allen. Probability of resurrection: 50%.

• Robin II/Jason Todd — killed by The Joker in Batman #428. Literally a victim of public opinion. Unless DC commissions another phone-in poll for the resurrection of this fellow, I believe that he is permanent wormfood.

A TRADE WITH THE JADE

VAL IS DREAMING

NEXT WEEK— VISIONS

Probability of resurrection: 5%.

• Golden Age Atom/Al Pratt, Golden Age Hourman/Rex Tyler, and Dr. Midnite/Dr. Charles McNider — killed by Monarch/Extant during Zero Hour #2 and #3. A third of the Justice Society of America wiped out in one fell swoop. You can bet that these oldsters will be dead for a long time. There doesn't seem to be a great emotional attachment to the senior superheroes at DC. Death is an awfully convenient retirement policy. Probability of resurrection: 7%.

• Johnny Quick — absorbed into the Speed Force during the "Dead Heat" storyline in Impulse #11. A recent loss, and it's hard to say whether it will be permanent. However, the glut of DC speedsters suggests that Johnny Quick is gone for good. Also, the Golden Age vintage of Johnny Quick is definitely a strike against him. However, if his daughter and successor, Jesse Quick, becomes popular, I expect to see him return from the Speed Force as a villain. Probability of resurrection: 10%.

• Ice/Tara Olafsdotter — killed by Overmaster during the "Judgment Day" storyline in Justice League Task Force #14. Justice League cannon fodder which produced some surprisingly emotional plot threads following her demise. Ice is probably most strongly remembered for her romantic relationship with Guy Gardner. Her death added a little humanity to his bravado and general obnoxiousness. With the high-powered nature of the current revamp of the Justice League, I would not expect to see any return of this character. Probability of resurrection: nil.

• Silver Sorceress/Laura Cynthia Nielsen — killed by Dreamslayer during the "Breakdowns" storyline in Justice League Europe #35. More Justice League cannon fodder. Very little emotional impact. I was more upset about the loss of Keith Giffen as the writer for this humorous run on the Justice League titles. What ever happened to her compatriot, Blue Jay? Probability of resurrection: nil.

• Dove/Dawn Granger — killed by Hawk/Monarch in Armageddon 2001 #2. Her death in the perplexing end to the Armageddon storyline precipitated the creation of Monarch. Not much emotional impact, but Monarch's creation had several far-reaching consequences for the DC universe. With the forces of Chaos and Order getting more attention in the new Book of Fate series, we may see a new incarnation of this character, who embodied the essence of Order. Probability of resurrection: 15%.

• Jericho/Joseph Wilson — killed by his father, Deathstroke the Terminator, during the "Titans Hunt" storyline in New Titans #83 and #84. The final punch in a rollercoaster ride of a story. With the new Teen Titans series, I don't see any reappearances of Jericho in the future. However, the mystical aspect of his evil spirits that darkened his nature does lend itself to possible new villainous manifestations. Probability of resurrection: 30%.

• The Creeper/Jack Ryder — killed by Eclipso in Eclipso #13. This particular bloodbath also claimed the lives of Major Victory, Peacemaker, Dr. Midnight II, Wildcat II, Commander Steel, and Manhunter. Lots of second stringers were killed off in this issue. However, The Creeper was special. I'm sure that we will see him creep back onto the stage sometime in the next few years. Probability of resurrection: 80%.

• Leviathan/Gim Allon/Colossal Boy of the Legion of Super-Heroes — killed while battling Doctor Regulus in Legion of Super-Heroes #83. The Legion has a history of killing heroes. This is the first of the Legionnaires to be buried at Shanghalla following the Zero Hour reboot. I know that Kid Quantum was first (Legion of Super-Heroes #62), but he had only been around for one mission. Gim's death is also the first major divergence from the pre-Zero Hour storyline. After teasing us with the "deaths" of Legionnaires Apparition and Andromeda, I think that this time it is for real. Probability of resurrection: 10%.

• Katma Tui, formerly of the Green Lantern Corps — killed by Star Sapphire in Action Comics Weekly #601. This death took a lot of us by surprise: no previews of coming plotlines, no warnings on the cover, no nothing. A lot of Green Lantern fans missed this key story, since it was hidden in the first issue of the weekly version of Action Comics. This event helped shape the emotional background of John Stewart, former Green Lantern and Darkstar. Probability of resurrection: 5%.

• Kilowog and the rest of the Green Lantern Corps — killed by the Silver Age Green Lantern in Green Lantern #49 and #50. Hal's rampage devastated what was left of the GL Corps and left the readers with mouths agape. However, his murder of Kilowog blew everyone away. Hal's redemption in the Final Night storyline cannot make up for this massacre. This one pushed a lot of people's buttons, including mine. Probability of resurrection: 15%.

• Arisia, formerly of the Green Lantern Corps — killed by Major Force in Guy Gardner: Warrior #43. Arista was one of the few members of the GL Corps still walking around after Hal's tantrum. She was snuffed to add some drama to the end of the Guy Gardner series. She was one of my personal favorites among the Corps and I thought her death a waste. Probability of resurrection: 10%.

As you may notice, this list focuses exclusively on super-heroes, even though some of the most significant deaths in any comics universe tend to be in its supporting cast, such as Thomas and Martha Wayne, the Flying Graysons, Lyn and C.C. Batson, the residents of Coast City, and the inhabitants of Krypton. I'll let somebody else put together a list of notable deceased villains, which ought to include the loss of most of The Flash's Rogues Gallery during the recent Underworld Unleashed mini-series. I've also avoided such "professionally" dead as Deadman, Spectre, and Apparition.

In closing, I have to give honorable mention to the deaths of Supergirl (Crisis on Infinite Earths #7) and Superboy (Legion of Super-Heroes #37 and #38). Although their loss may have been rendered moot due to the events of Crisis and Zero Hour, the stories of their passing and the resultant grief of their comrades are some of the most emotion-packed storytelling that you are likely to find in any medium.

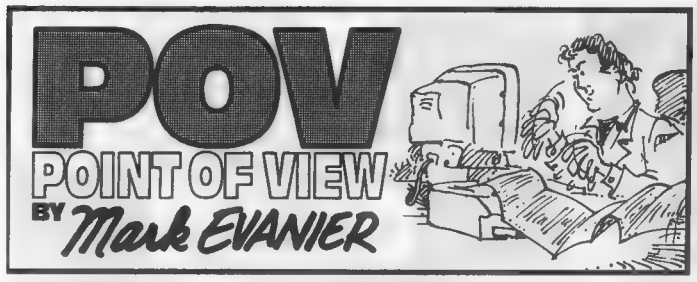
International Orders Welcome



About 15 years ago, a very fine, very successful writer asked me to his home to discuss a project. He had created and/or produced a number of hit comedies in his day. We'd worked together on a show which, alas, did not fall into the "hit" category, but I was still honored to see my name in the same credit-roll as his. He was bright, he was honest, and he was very respectful of the creative energies of others.

So when he said he had a show and wanted to involve me, I said yes. You would have, too, if you'd known this man. He sat me down and, wasting little time on preliminaries, told me how his new venture had come about.

About a year earlier, he had heard that one of the networks had made a holding deal with that wonderful comic actor Jack Weston. A "holding deal" meant that they were paying him not to go elsewhere while they tried to locate a project to star him. My friend had a semi-autobiographical idea for a show that was absolutely perfect for Weston, so he called up the network and "took" (as they say) a meeting.

He described the idea at that point and I loved it. So did the network the day he told it to them. They made a deal with this writer-producer to write-produce a pilot and he went off to tackle the first half of that task.

That's when the trouble started.

My friend, the seasoned writer-producer, was blocked. He couldn't write it. He had the idea, he loved the idea, he'd lived the idea — but, when he sat at the typewriter, nothing came out. On the rare occasions when he wrote a few pages, they'd be torn and trashed within hours.

Weeks passed. Months. His agent got him an extension from the network. Still, nothing was written.

It was maddening. Often, when writers become blocked — and it happens to most of us, sooner or later, usually sooner — it's because they don't know where to go, don't know their own stories. But my friend knew his story. He could talk it out eloquently, tossing off funny dialogue and clever situations. He just couldn't put it on paper and, yes, he tried dictating it all into a tape recorder and having someone else transcribe it. Didn't work. Nothing worked.

There are some writers who aren't the least bit troubled when the muse deserts them. Usually, they are folks who write as but one of several things they do, so when the well goes dry they can switch to Plan B until inspiration returns. Sadly, for some, it doesn't return — but at least, they have that other occupation. They aren't stuck, as some of us are, wracking our brains, smiting our foreheads, and pacing the floors, feeling utterly and irrevocably useless.

When writing is all you do with any competence, not writing creates a massive hole in your life. It's easy to tumble into that hole and find yourself unable to climb out.

There are psychologists who treat blocks, usually by addressing the underlying troubles in one's life. If you're depressed about your relationship with a loved one or carrying around some massive amount of parent-induced guilt, it's probably real easy to not be able to put five words together.

That stuff, I can't begin to discuss here. But I have found, in the 27 years I've been making a living doing this, that there are ways of beating back the simpler strains.

An important consideration is this: Are you blocked on everything or just on one project? I've known writers who get stopped on Page 113 of a novel and they just stay there for weeks or months, writing nothing, staring at Page 113 until it starts staring back. For me, getting stranded on Page 113 usually means I took a wrong turn on 112 or 111 or even much earlier.

Go back and tear up some pages. Or, if you're writing on a computer, move the last section to a separate file (just in case) and try it again.

If that doesn't work, then you might have the problem I mentioned earlier: You don't know where to go next because you really and truly don't know where you want to go.

You think you know what you're writing about. You possibly have fooled an editor or a producer — you certainly have fooled yourself. But really, deep down, a piece is absent from the puzzle. You need to stop and reassess what you're attempting to write. One of my heroes, playwright Alan Jay Lerner, once said that he sometimes got through five or six drafts before he figured out what he had really been trying to say. Only then did the meaningful work begin.

In such times, it sometimes helps to be able to put the work aside and turn to something else, if only for a few hours. I usually have several projects in the works at any given time and, to the extent practical, I try to make them as divergent from one another as possible. That way, one can more easily serve as recess from another.

If you don't have another project, create one. The best cure I've ever found for fast, fast, fast relief of Temporary Writers' Block is what I call Evanier's Three-Page Self-Indulgent Diversion. What you do is to put the pressing composition on hold and write something for yourself and the waste basket. Three pages is usually more than sufficient, though it is sometimes so much fun that you'll want to go longer.

Pick out a subject that interests only you and write something childish and self-absorbed. Forget about grammar, forget about spelling, and, for God's sake, forget about ever showing it to anyone else. Write the story of how someone you hate met an untimely but well-deserved death. Or select someone after whom you have secretly lusted and write the tale of how that unattainable person came to you one night, confessing to reciprocal lust and begging you to have your way with them. The more immature, the better.

Once you're done, you can throw it away. The idea is just to prime your pump by writing something, casting aside whatever inhibitions are freezing up your typing fingers lately.

(Relevant aside: A glamour photographer once told me that a favorite trick he had for when a model "froze" before his camera was to get the subject to just make funny and grotesque faces for one roll of film. He pulled out an album of some of the world's most beautiful women, crossing their perfectly-mascara'ed eyes and pulling out the corners of their expertly-painted lips. "Once they've done that," he explained, "they stop worrying so much about how they come across in print and they can start looking like human beings.")

A lot of writers get way too tense at the keyboard. It's as though some immense disaster will befall them if they write a few pages that aren't up to some standard. They forget that paper is cheap and that there's no harm in wasting a little of it, now and then.

(Another relevant aside: The first time I ever took an art class in college, the instructor said, "I don't watch to catch anyone here conserving paper. Fill up as much of it as you can.")

Thanks to word processing, it isn't even environmentally unsound to write a lot of stuff you toss out. You just delete it from your hard disk.

(Yet another relevant aside — the last one, I promise: A friend of mine, a noted artist, told me that, when he freezes on an assignment, he'll just haul out his sketchbook and doodle. He has this old, shabby book of cheap drawing paper and he'll just mentally put aside the crucial project and sketch anything that comes to mind or into his line of sight. It's important, he says, that he do this in the dog-eared sketchbook; if he tries to draw the same thing on quality illustration board, it feels as though it's Real Art, and he tightens up.

Doing it in the book tells his drawing hand that this is not for keeps, that it will be held to no particular standard, and that it's OK to mess up. "It keeps me drawing," he explained. "And sometimes, something emerges on the page that inspires me to get back to the deadline job or maybe gives me an idea for its design.")

I don't know which (if any) of these things might have helped my friend write his Jack Weston pilot. By the night he called me to his home, he had already given up on it. But that was OK with the network, because they'd already given up on both him and Jack Weston.

It seems that, while my friend was agonizing over his story, things "happened" at the network. When things "happen" at a network, it means only one thing: Somebody got fired. In this case, many somebodies got fired.

New somebodies were brought in to run the Comedy Development division. It is a near-inviolate rule of Hollywood that, when you're hired to replace someone, your first order of business is to kill all your predecessor's projects. When my friend's agent inquired, he learned that the new honchos had no interest whatsoever in this or any show starring Jack Weston. They had, in fact, allowed their option on Weston to lapse. The agent tried to rouse some interest in the idea, with or without Weston attached, both at that network and all the others. There was none.

"It's never going to happen," he told my blocked comrade. "But they have to pay you for it, if you hand it in. Just write anything that resembles a pilot script and send it to them so we can get your money."

My friend found the news curi-

★ To boldly go — again. Reuters reported that Paramount has officially given the go-ahead for a ninth Star Trek movie. Little word is out about the project yet; however, it is known that Michael Piller, former Next Generation and Deep Space Nine executive producer and current Star Trek Voyager creative consultant, is developing the story with Star Trek head exec Rick Berman. The story is rumored to focus on Captain Jean-Luc Picard and is expected to hit theaters for the 1998 holiday season.

★ Look for (dare we say it?) more literal television coming your way soon. Fast on the heels of the critical success of Stephen King's The Shining, the mini-series' producers Richard Rubenstein and Mitchell Galin have acquired the rights to Isaac Asimov's Caves of Steel, The Naked Sun, Robots of Dawn, and Robots and Empire. At this time, they plan to combine two of the books into a live-action mini-series, most likely for ABC, while holding development on the remaining two for a follow-up mini-series.

The producers also own the television rights to Frank Herbert's Dune and its sequels and are developing a mini-series and a possible regular series.

50 ASSORTED STAR TREK GENE RODDENBERRY SETS

Way back in the beginning Star Trek was struggling to get onto the airwaves. T.V. Networks and stations could not understand the concept in words. Gene Roddenberry took to presenting pictures on Mini Cards to the T.V. stations in his promotional mailings and thus created a unique 19 set 504 card collectable card set. Produced from about 1973-1987 or so, each set had only one very small printing (as Magill Barrett Roddenberry) states. The pictures were taken on the set by Gene himself, showing various phases of each production, including himself, costumes, creatures (some that made it and some that did not) Each set is 16 cards long and there are 19 sets total. Order yours today as we have a very limited supply and they can never be re-made as the negatives do not exist anymore!

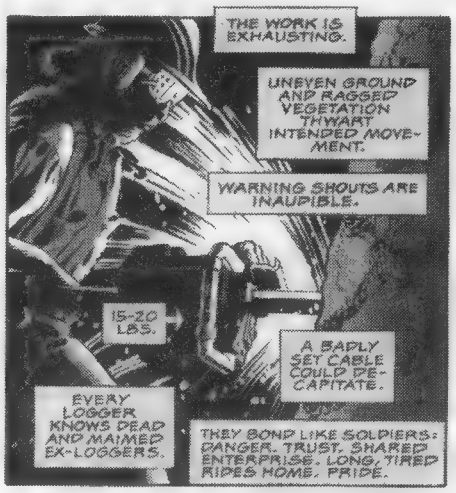
• Concrete: Think like a Mountain is the trade paperback compilation ($17.95, ISBN 1-56971-176-3) of Paul Chadwick's Dark Horse mini-series. Chadwick's stories of the man granted super-powers from being encased in a shell have ranged from light entertainment to thought-provoking, analytical entertainment. They are, in short, always entertaining — and often more than that.



Concrete: Think like a Mountain

The summary above ("the man granted super-powers") makes Chadwick's work sound as though it fits some sort of industry mold — but Concrete has never fit a stereotype. The torments of the character are as much a part of each story as the benefits conferred by strength. And Think like a Mountain is a careful dissection of the actions of what some have termed "eco-terrorists."

There are two brief sequences in which Chadwick powerfully de-stereotypes loggers — although the work as a whole is a clear support of doing what it takes to protect the unreplaceable. The work closes with a personal seven-page essay by Chadwick providing further insights into the actions of people fighting to save life that began its growth before Columbus left Europe.

The art supports the polemic. The story is — first and foremost — dynamic entertainment. People who have read other Concrete material have probably already bought the series — and this is an ideal example of the best of the field. Potential readers who for some reason still haven't bought Chadwick's stories would do well to start with this. (And, if you know people interested in ecology, you have in these pages an unusual gift for them.)

• Todd McFarlane's Spawn TV series on HBO may bring more readers to the comic book. In the meantime, Spawn #59 (Mar 97, Image, $1.95) carries in its closing pages a strange response to a letter writer: "In response to some of the criticism of some of the other Image books, other companies such as Defiant, Malibu and Valiant all stress stories over art but the last time I checked, two out [of] three of them are no longer doing business and the third has had to restructure its business practices. Story or art. Which is more important? I'm always going to side with the artists and

Spawn* #59

Image Comics is living proof of that."

Leaving aside any number of obvious responses to these remarks, the reason the comments are strange is that McFarlane himself (as the letter-writer commented) has done a good job of (duh) telling stories. Spawn is not just a glorified picture book, with page layouts limited to no more than three panels so that characters can pose in pin-up shots to hype their prices on the original-art market. Spawn has intriguing, likable characters (and intriguing, unlikable characters). Those characters interact to provide an ongoing plot — and to motivate the reader to find out what happens next.

This issue's story ("Vanished") is by McFarlane, pencils are by Greg Capullo, and inks are by McFarlane, Chance Wolf, and Danny Miki. This first installment of a longer story features big-eyed Cyan (and, it seems likely, real-life art by the real-life Cyan) — and a sinister threat to peace, quiet, and a happy family life. As noted, there are intriguing, likable characters and a plot that makes the reader turn the pages, eager for the next development.

Oh, yes, and terrific, dynamic art.

• Speaking of Image, what started as a mainstream line aimed at kids in search of work by hot artists has steadily diversified. Now, thanks in part to aggressive recruiting of a variety of creators with a variety of visions, the Image "i" logo appears on an increasingly wide assortment of entertainment.

Soulwind (#2, Apr 97, black and white, $2.95) is written and drawn by C. Scott Morse and is exceptionally attractive. Its all-ages appeal combines with a strong, action-filled story involving charming characters trying to figure out how to convey to a boy that he may never see his home again — as dark forces threaten them all.

"You just got hand-picked to save the planet ... Your first mission, Captain, is to find Soulwind and destroy the evil smuggling operation known as The Dynasty." This installment of the story of that boy (who still does not know the extent of the danger) is exciting and well-handled. The problem is that a decreasing number of comics buffs are willing to pay $3 for one quickly read episode in a series of unknown length featuring new characters. And, I suspect, a decreasing number of stores will stock this terrific new title.

Look. At least take a look at this — especially if you're a TV or movie producer looking for an entertaining property.

Soulwind* #2

Point of View

ously liberating but he still couldn't put anything on paper, which is where I came in. He needed someone else to write the pilot script — a script which had virtually no chance of ever seeing the light of a Sony Trinitron.

He was not asking me to ghost for him. He'd called up the network and asked, "Is it OK if I have this kid named Mark Evanier work on this with me?" They said sure. They didn't care. He could have brought in a rhesus monkey to do the job if it knew how to use an IBM Selectric. They might even have preferred he not tie up the time of a writer they respected.

He offered me a very fair deal to write the script and to put both our names on it. That was not an unfair credit line, either, because we spent the rest of the evening with him talking through the story in very complete form. I scribbled it all down, and, just as he was walking me to the door, I said I'd send a finished script over in a week or so.

"To the network, right?" he said.

I said, "No, I'll send it over to you so you can read it, see if you think it can be improved, maybe add a few —"

"No, no, I'm sure it'll be fine. Send it over to the network."

"But your name's going on this, along with mine," I responded. "Don't you want to even read it?"

"Why?" he asked. "No one else will."

I knew he was right, which is why the script became maybe the hardest thing I've ever had to write. His "block" was contagious — in my case because I simply could not get motivated to write something that would never be filmed.

All of us in TV and movies, or who want to be in TV and movies, write things that don't get made. Some of them are even less likely to happen than this one was; at least, this script would see the inside of a network office, which is more than most do. But all the time I wrote, it was right there in my face that no matter what I did, no matter how good or bad the words were, no actors would ever speak them, no audience would ever hear them.

Even with all he had given me, it still took forever. Finally, after much pain and suffering — and one or two of those self-indulgent diversions — I got it done. I called my friend and asked, "You sure you don't want to see it first?"

He answered, "No, just send it over so they'll send us our checks." I gathered from his tone that he never wanted to hear about this story again.

I called the messenger service to pick up the script and I put a copy into a manila envelope. But before someone came for it, I had an idea — probably my best of the whole project. I took the script out and removed Page 3.

I picked Page 3, because, first, it was early enough in the script that, if anyone read any of it, they'd get at least that far. I also picked Page 3 because its absence would be obvious. There was a huge jump in the continuity between the bottom of Page 2 and the top of Page 4. I just wanted to see if anyone at the network would call to request the missing page — and, of course, no one ever did. My friend got his check, I got my check, and that was the last I ever heard of the idea for Jack Weston.

Oddly enough, though I'm usually pretty good about keeping every draft of everything I write, my files seem to not have a copy of this script. I do, however, have Page 3.

Not a bad little page, really. If the rest of the script was this good, the network really missed out on something.

And if I'm ever writing a script that needs a Page 3, I'm set.

This column comes to you from Mark Evanier, who can be reached, to the extent a person like him can be reached at all, by writing to 363 S. Fairfax Ave., #303, Los Angeles, CA 90036.

Elfquest and the Pinis: 25 years of defining moments

By Wendy and Richard Pini

We were at the breakfast table on the Sunday morning of this year's WonderCon. Maggie Thompson and Cheryl Clementi were discussing with the two of us what is needed for this issue of CBG — the "Wendy and Richard make it to 25 years" issue. Funny, we thought, that a publication devoted to the art and commerce of comics wanted to include a piece on an event/celebration that has, on the surface of it, so little to do with comics. Digging deeper, though, we discovered a heckuva correspondence between who we are and what we do.

Providing a conceptual nudge, Maggie asked us, "How did you do it?" Meaning, of course, how did we get from point A to point B, a quarter century later? Our first, impulsive answer (not voiced at that breakfast meeting): Elfquest, the creation and publication of that single, monumental project throughout most of our 25 years. It's been our life's work and passion, our life's glue.

"It's amazing what an incredible gift Elfquest has been. Through all our ups and downs, it has remained untouched."
— Wendy Pini

But that's almost too easy. Is there nothing more? We wondered what the "defining moments" of our lives together might be, those milestones that made us who we are, without any reference to the Wolfriders and their cohorts. Such moments certainly exist, and we easily acknowledged them. Still, we discovered that our exploration of mutual memory mainly called forth connections between elves and selves.

Now, as we write these words, Wendy, perhaps, says it best: "It's amazing what an incredible gift Elfquest has been. Through all our ups and downs, it has remained untouched. It's the one thing in our lives that's been consistent." Love of the story never wavers. To paraphrase a key line from the movie Jurassic Park, "Love will find a way." And it makes a pretty good people-glue, too.

1978's Fantasy Quarterly #1 contained the first published appearance of the Elfquest characters.

1972 — A few hours after "the plumbers" broke into the Democratic National Headquarters in the Watergate Hotel in Washington, D.C., Wendy Fletcher and Richard Pini tied the proverbial knot in Orange, Conn. In what could only be a glimpse of things to come, the couple made a quick stop on the way to their apartment near Boston to purchase that week's new comics; Richard lost his wallet somewhere near the store.

RP: I was a consummate collector back then, a Marvel Zombie years before the term was coined. Of course, I was going to stop — the drugstore was on the way home, right?

WP: That was entirely his idea: stopping on our wedding night to buy comic books! Think about that, ladies. We ate "dinner" (at a local deli) on my last five dollars.

1973 — Wendy stopped working on "the great Stormbringer project," sold more of her art at science-fiction conventions, and began to provide illustrations for the Hayden Planetarium in Boston, where Richard was working as a lecturer-writer-photographer.

RP: I didn't really get along with the Elric stuff Wendy was working on; it struck me as dark and fatalistic. I really wanted things light in those early years; working 9-to-5 and then 8-to-6 and then — That was heavy enough.

WP: I gave up a five-year obsession, making an animated film out of Michael Moorcock's magnum opus, and settled into helping us make a living. Welcome to the world of being responsible married people!

Wendy and Richard Pini appeared in 1993's "Fantasy with Teeth" tour.

1974 — Wendy got her first professional work from Jim Baen, then-editor for the science-fiction magazines Galaxy and Worlds of If.

RP: Talk about mixed emotions. I was glad that Wendy was pulling in additional income — things were tight in those early years — but there was envy, as well. The ability to draw is pure magic to me; I didn't wish I could do it myself, but I sure longed for the attention it could attract!

WP: Breakthrough! I entered, somewhat awkwardly, pro-dom. The work, though some of it was downright dreadful, showed promise. I felt happy that I was going to be contributing to our joint fortunes, that Richard would not be the only breadwinner.

1975 — Wendy took up belly dancing. 'Nuff said.

RP: Work was getting intense, and, as a kind of therapy, I took up airbrush painting. Mirabile dictu, I could actually do this stuff — and thus began treading on Wendy's turf, making a bit of a name for myself at convention art shows. It was — heady.

WP: A girl can't sit on her butt forever, only drawing and painting. I wanted some kind of exercise that included a healthy dose of self-expression and got caught up in the belly-dance craze of the 1970s. And was quite good at it, thank you very much!

1976 — Wendy and Richard learned of a "Red Sonja" convention devoted entirely to Marvel Comics' newest heroine. Wendy entered and won the "Red Sonja Lookalike Contest"; Richard helped her construct the definitive "cast-iron bikini." Meanwhile, Richard switched planetariums, trading in Boston's for one connected to a high-school teaching position.

WP: The "Red Sonja & The Wizard" show was right up my alley. I was in great shape because of the dancing and ready to perform. Frank Thorne was a great mentor and friend. Our show was a socially acceptable way for me to vent a hell of a lot of anger.

RP: After four years at the Hayden, I'd reached my limit. At the high school, the pond was smaller but I was top fish. So for a while, at least, I was on cloud nine — I could write scripts, direct the shows, be a ham, run the universe.

1977 — Wendy sat Richard down and told him a story; eventually it would be given the name Elfquest. There was also a short

Wendy appeared as Red Sonja with Red Sonja artist Frank Thorne as The Wizard.

Wendy created this Red Sonja scene in 1977 as part of a series of slides to accompany a Red Sonja storytelling event.

Using freedom

By Wendy Pini

Probably, there are few female artist-writers in the comics industry — or in the entertainment field as a whole — who have had the amount of personal freedom of expression that I've had. For a human who needs to be heard, the chance to create a soapbox that seems never to totter, never to break, is extremely rare. To be asked over a period of 20 years to publicly continue one's experiment with ideas — to have one's absences tolerated — to be welcomed upon return and be able to pick up where one left off — is a long-term agreement no artist can reasonably expect to have with any audience. Yet this has been my experience. It begs a hard look back at what I've chosen to do with that precious freedom.

Why elves? I'll always try to give a serious answer, though the question is seldom asked with seriousness or any real desire to know. "Why ducks?" I respond. "Why a bunny with major attitude and a Brooklyn accent?" It takes no more lines to draw a cartoon duck than a cartoon elf. But some icons are more universal than others. Bugs and Donald belong to this world, to modern life and the frustrations we all share and need to laugh away. My big-eyed elves, however, demand that you enter their organic, smogless, spiritual realm where the only common ground is raw emotion. This is not everyone's — certainly not your average comic-book reader's — idea of entertainment. So, if few can or want to relate to them, why elves?

Simply, I latched onto a set of personal hieroglyphics in my mid-20s and never became bored or fed up with the kinds of sentences I could form with them — as some fortune tellers use one Tarot deck throughout their careers, finding infinite ways to interpret the familiar image on each card and infinite ways to combine those images in order to discover a larger, subjective truth.

It is true that, after 20 years, my body of work has received no major comics industry awards. Despite the respect I've been shown, what I have to offer has never really been what the young Turks could use. If, to some, my artwork seems facile, my characters saccharine and trivial, I can only say it still pleases me to work with them. I've found joy in telling my stories my way and power in the emotional response they seem to generate in my particular audience. Tears heal. "Different" thinking rouses discussion. Beautiful, sensuous curves soothe. Pastel shades require study that refines perception. And when it appears, violence, by stark contrast, wrenches the heart and gives pause.

This is what I know how to do. This is what still moves many. And that, to me, is what being an artist is all about. I'll thank God for it as long as I live.

dress-rehearsal for bicoastal living, as Wendy worked briefly at the Ralph Bakshi animation studio in California.

WP: This year was a Dreamtime. I remember living in some kind of furious daze of non-stop creativity — I was inspired by the fantasy-conscious times, by all that was going on in the world of entertainment.

RP: Star Wars happened. The entire world went nuts for science fiction and fantasy. Suddenly, Wendy and I were confronted with the idea that perhaps maybe our little project might have a shot, as well. Time to stop saying "what if" and to start getting on the horse.

1978 — Fantasy Quarterly #1 featuring Elfquest, published by IPS (Independent Publisher's Syndicate) appeared in February. Shortly thereafter Wendy's mother died. IPS folded; Warp Graphics picked up the elfin publishing reins.

RP: After diddling with IPS for months without seeing our first issue, I got the wild hair to fly from Boston to Detroit to confront the publisher. It was completely a spur-of-the-moment act; to my great surprise, it worked. Most of all, it showed me that making noise could have an effect.

WP: With my mother's death, just at the time I was starting to make something of myself, I lost my harshest judge and jury. I realized I would have to start all over again to find out who I was.

In addition to her Elfquest and Red Sonja art, Wendy produced drawings for planetarium shows, like the one above from 1973 illustrating the perils of eclipse-watching, and paintings for comics based on the Beauty and the Beast TV show for First Comics (below).

RP: After four years dealing with an oppressive school administration, I was about to go postal. A good friend suggested I try the world of computers, so I made the decision to move. What did I have to lose?

WP: Lots of adjustments: a move, a small new house, arguments over which room I would have as my studio. We finally compromised, and I got down to writing and drawing Elfquest full-time.

1980 — Notoriety began to take its toll. Both Warp and the world began to make increasing demands on Wendy's time and talent. Tensions mounted. For the first time since getting married, Wendy and Richard took a vacation — a week in St. Thomas.

WP: It's all a blur. There was way, way too much work, too many deadlines, too many opportunities jumped at simply because they were offered. Success showed itself to be both heady and oppressive.

RP: We almost drowned swimming in St. Thomas. The tide started going out, and we were exhausted. I think it was supposed to be a life-lesson. Whatever we were doing, we needed to think about taking time for ourselves. In retrospect, the lesson would take years to learn.

1981 — Richard, faced with growing responsibilities from both IBM and Elfquest*, quit Big Blue. Berkley Publications published the first* Elfquest novelization. Donning/Starblaze published the first Elfquest graphic novel.

WP: On top of everything else, I began to notice difficulty in walking. The joy of dancing started to elude me. I think I went into denial — buried myself in my work — to the detriment of my health and my relationship with Richard.

RP: The decision to quit IBM took months of agonizing; I was really scared to leave the security of the job. Once I did quit, it was "out of the frying pan" time: Suddenly, publishing took priority over everything else.

1982 — Donning/Starblaze published the second Elfquest graphic novel. For the first time, Warp Graphics sought outside assistance to even out some of the work load.

WP: Irony. The gentle fantasy of Elfquest was completely at odds with the pressures I was under professionally, emotionally, and physically.

RP: Now it's my turn to call forth a blur. Elfquest was succeeding beyond our every dream, yet there was always another deadline, another demand, another project. Wendy was the golden goose, and I fear I was becoming the butcher.

1983 — Warp Graphics purchased a house separate from Wendy and Richard's residence to serve as an office/studio.

WP: We started trying to take care of ourselves. Acquiring office space away from the house was the smartest move we could have made. I plunged toward the completion of the "first quest," aware that, despite Elfquest's huge popularity, I wasn't being taken seriously as an artist or writer.

RP: For several years we'd been living in each others' sweat, as we called it. At last, we both had space to work and a place to "come home" to. The comic book was selling 100,000 copies per issue, the graphic novels were doing great, people wanted more and more, and publisher-me wanted to supply them. We needed the retreat.

1984 — The first Elfquest saga concluded; there were celebrations all year at various conventions. At the end of the year, Wendy underwent her first major surgery to correct hip dysplasia.

WP: I remember mixed reactions to how we ended the Quest, but there was so much more story to tell. I remember the touching well-wishes of people in the comics industry — particularly Don and Maggie Thompson — for my hip surgery. Richard and I had moments of closeness again, as I recovered.

RP: It hit me hard, then: With Elfquest done (for the time), I was a publisher with nothing to publish! What to do, what to do? I thought, optimistically, that Warp could recreate with other people's comics what it had accomplished with Elfquest.

1985 — CBS optioned Elfquest for Saturday morning animation. Wendy began to work with Zander's Animation Parlor in New York to develop the show. Richard co-created Apple Comics with Mike Catron to be a "sister" publishing company to Warp Graphics.

WP: I was very happy to be involved with the development of Elfquest for animation. Quite honestly, I felt more at home in that medium than I'd been in comics — even as I was aware that I was sacrificing the comics to pursue the animation.

RP: Working with creators who were not Wendy was a big leap for me. No one knew yet what the rules were, and I remember a desperate desire to the balance being fair both to those writers and artists who did work for us and also to Warp. I wish I could have seen the dark clouds forming.

1986 — Wendy underwent more hip surgery. Legal difficulties made themselves known and escalated. Wendy and Richard decided to go for counseling to face growing pressures from within and without.

RP: The space shuttle Challenger exploding early in the year set the tone for me; it was a unrelentingly gloomy time. Many I'd thought were partners or allies turned out not to be. I felt as if I carried the entire weight of Warp on my shoulders. She tried, but not even Wendy could lighten the load.

WP: We still loved each other but couldn't help each other. Nothing we did that year bore fruit. I couldn't believe how many people — including supposed friends — were eager to believe the worst of us and see us fall. It was "get counseling" or "split up."

1987 — 1986 redux*.*

WP: I finally asked for help from a Power higher than myself. The answers were immediate and healing. I stopped blaming others and began forgiving.

RP: Counseling worked, thank heaven, in that it kept Wendy and me talking to each other and working on "doing things different" from old self-injurious ways. With legal battles dragging on, no end in sight, I needed all the light and wisdom I could get.

1988 — Warp's legal battles were all settled favorably, and, for the first time, the company functioned unhindered as a full-service publisher, offering new 10th anniversary editions of all Elfquest graphic novels to date.

WP: A mixed bag. I enjoyed improved health, got pleasure from art directing Chelsea Animation in recoloring the anniversary editions, began to explore the theater, and took wonderful classes in "creativity unblocking" at the Actor's Institute in New York City.

RP: Elfquest was ours again, and I was in the driver's seat again. I felt like Martin Luther King — "free at last!"

1989 — Wendy produced the first of two Beauty and the Beast graphic novels for First Comics.

WP: The Beauty and the Beast television show was very special, and I wanted to support it. I created the opportunity to write and paint the graphic novels. First Comics got the license to publish them and I remember Richard feeling as betrayed about that as if I'd been unfaithful.

WARP

RP: I was riding the euphoria generated by Warp's legal and publishing victories and was disappointed that Warp wouldn't publish Wendy's new work. Of course, I'd forgotten that I'd previously published not-Wendy comics, too. Still, I managed to help a little and felt good about that.

1990 — Warp Graphics began publishing Kings of the Broken Wheel*, the most ambitious* Elfquest series yet. Wendy took studio space in town, completely separate from both the Warp business office and the "living house."

WP: With "Kings" it was just the two of us again. This was our most cosmic storyline so far. We found we were re-experiencing the old excitement of working on a story together, coming up with new and exciting ideas.

RP: I'd gotten bogged down in the administrivia of running a company and had forgotten how much fun it was simply to take a walk together and toss ideas back and forth. It's an important facet of the bond that we share, and I was glad to discover it was still there.

1991 — Warp published Return to Centaur*, the first half of an* Elfquest/Xanth crossover graphic novel. Seven years after her first surgery, Wendy opted for a total hip replacement; the operation was successful beyond her wildest expectations.

WP: After much soul-searching, I decided I wanted to enjoy my 40s. The total replacement was my third hip surgery, and it relieved much of my chronic arthritis pain. I felt like I had experienced a miracle!

RP: The "Xanth" crossover was one of the most emotion-filled projects I'd ever collaborated on. Working with Piers Anthony, meeting the real "Jenny Elf," took me so far out of myself, it felt like flying. I think both Wendy and I were starting to learn the differences between form and substance in our working relationships.

1992 — Warp shifted from black and white to color and expanded from a single bimonthly Elfquest title to several monthly titles.

WP: There was much creative satisfaction, very heavy deadlines, but great joy in talking with other artists and writers and finding work for them to do.

RP: The Elfquest story engine was running faster than ever. Wendy and I had had our most far-reaching discussions yet, and I was revved to make up creative teams so that all those potential tales could be told. Warp was finally going to be a "real" comic-book company — so I thought.

1993 — Elfquest*'s 15th anniversary was the occasion of a year-long "Fantasy with Teeth" tour. Richard's father died.*

WP: I remember feelings of triumph, of fulfillment, of being fed by the fans' love which was still there after 15 years. The year was capped by an incredible signing at the Golden Apple comics shop in Los Angeles, where the fans lined up around the block and movie producer Ed Pressman stood in line for two hours, sounding out people's feelings about Elfquest. We were hot again!

RP: What a whirlwind of sound and fury and logistics — and all the while thinking, "It's really only little ol' us." I was so turned around by it all that my father's death in the middle of the year didn't quite seem real until much later, when I found myself reaching for the phone to call him and having to stop.

1994 — In pursuit of the latest and most promising option on Elfquest as an animated film, Wendy relocated to Los Angeles to be the project's "passionate advocate." Wendy and Richard traveled to Japan as part of Tezuka Studio's first international symposium on comics.

WP: Fully aware that most projects in Hollywood don't get made, I was determined to give this my very best shot. Richard and I could still be prickly with each other, but we'd arrived at a place of peace in our hearts. We were confident enough in our marriage to reinvent it once more, this time bicoastally.

RP: We talked about this move for months before Wendy actually went out there; it was as momentous to us as my leaving IBM all those years ago. Was it the right thing to do? How would we feel? How would we cope? We didn't know all the answers, but our confidence was high — and earned.

1995 — Warp published its first children's book, A Gift of Her Own*. The comic-book direct market began a serious downward slide, taking* Elfquest with it.

WP: I was very worried about Richard and Warp and at the same time didn't want to interfere. Our "turfs" were very clearly defined. I wanted to help, but there was only so much Richard would let me do.

RP: I knew I was publishing quality material and for the life of me I couldn't figure out why sales were falling. It was a bad time; I wondered every night where and how I'd failed. Wendy tried to bolster me but she had her own fish to fry; I felt I needed solid financial and managerial help, not a pep talk.

1996 — Development continued on the Elfquest animated film; Wendy completed both storyboard and screenplay. Richard made the decision to consolidate multiple Elfquest titles into a single monthly anthology.

WP: Sometimes it felt like one step forward and two steps back on the movie, as we made the rounds, taking meetings, doing lunch. For the first time, though, people became more important to me than Elfquest. If the movie never got made, I could live with that, but I'd never again be able to live without my friends.

RP: It was a real close call for us. But I think we pulled it out of the fire. Warp finally had teams of creative people all pulling in the same direction, and the results were solidly good. Even though half the artists were scattered all over the map, even though Wendy was a continent away, Warp felt like a family.

1997 — Nineteen years of Elfquest*. Twenty years of Warp Graphics. Twenty-five years of Wendy and Richard Pini.*

WP & RP: Wow!

Richard and Wendy Pini today.

Visceral honesty — and symbiosis

By Richard Pini

A good friend, Ken Mitchroney, has a wonderfully mordant way of describing the creative process. He pantomimes the act of hara-kiri, slicing himself open with an imaginary sword, and then grabs handfuls of virtual guts and hurls them at the blank paper on his drawing board.

Wendy and I often describe Elfquest in a similar way, the display of one's insides on the page for all the world to see. To us, this visceral honesty is the essence of the creative act. A writer or artist must be willing to bare his or her innermost self for the work to have meaning.

Naturally there exist, in the world of comic books, degrees of honesty. The spectrum runs all the way from the unflinchingly literal, giving us such intimate offerings as Harvey Pekar and Joyce Brabner's Our Cancer Year, to the completely evasive, responsible for the antics of most present-day super-heroes — a banal, posturing, physically and spiritually ugly lot if ever there was one.

Somewhere between those two endpoints lies the category of fantasy called allegory. Fairy tales live there — and fables and rite of passage lessons. These stories tell truth about real life but they do so costumed in symbolic garb — sort of a "spoonful of sugar" to help the medicine go down. When we listen to or read a fairy tale, we can take as little or as much of the wisdom as we're ready to absorb — and every time we re-experience the story, we both bring and take away something new.

For 20 years, Wendy and I have been sharing with our audience the allegory that we call Elfquest. For two decades we've been opening up our skins and limning the events, trials, stumbles, and successes of our lives. The reader sees words and lines drawn in ink; we two know that the medium of expression is actually the sweat and tears and laughter of personal experience. From the beginning, and especially through tough times, we made and stuck to the commitment that Elfquest would be the symbolic but honest chronicle of our own human journey. I've let bits and pieces of myself loose on paper, especially lately, that once I'd never have dreamed I could share with strangers.

Mostly, readers have rewarded us with understanding and compassion in their interpretation of what we've done. Sometimes, our work has been dismissed as being superficial. Once in a while a critic, for reasons totally opaque to us, defines Elfquest as a license to eviscerate its creators or take a cheap shot.

One of the very few drawbacks to Elfquest, from where I sit, is that Wendy and I have painted ourselves into a bit of a corner with respect to destructive criticism. We get a lot of letters via the post office and e-mail, and there have been times when one or the other of us has desperately wanted to reply to certain correspondents, "I've read your comments, and you're a real numbskull, you know that?" But the people we must surely be (in order to create such a "nice" story) would never do that — even though the elves are, necessarily, idealized reflections of ourselves. Staying diplomatic is onerously frustrating at times.

Ah, well. We've persevered and survived and here we are once again smearing ourselves — for the edification or amusement or irritation of others — on the printed page of a publication devoted primarily to comics, not biographies. Truth is, though, Wendy and I and Elfquest live in symbiosis. Perhaps there was a time, at the very beginning, when we might have chosen to distance ourselves from the story — but there's no getting away from it now. We've given the elves free rein to speak for us.

And what's the bottom line? Love — of friends, of soulmates, of work, of the story — is what matters. Period.

Silent Bob speaks: An overview of comics and films in Kevin Smith's world

By George Khoury

Kevin Smith is the writer and director of Clerks, Mallrats, the recently released Chasing Amy, and the upcoming Dogma (1998). He is a comic-book admirer and the screenwriter for the new Superman movie and The Six Million Dollar Man at Universal. His films are loaded with comic-book references and innuendos. Smith has been host of The Anti Gravity Room on The Sci-Fi Channel several times and plays the character Silent Bob in his films. Chasing Amy, involves a love triangle that crosses sexuality and friendship among comic-book creators.

CBG: Have comics influenced your screenwriting?

Kevin Smith: Definitely on The Six Million Dollar Man. The only way comics influenced my three films — four, if you count Dogma — was that there were a lot of comic-book references. In Chasing Amy, that's what the main characters do for a living: They write comics.

CBG: Would you consider doing comics?

Smith: Yeah, I've been thinking about writing comics a lot lately. I don't know, I [would like to] write Green Arrow.

CBG: What's the status on The Six Million Dollar Man*?*

Smith: What happened is I turned in the script and the executives that I pitched the story to weren't there any more. They were twice removed by the time I turned in my script. So the story that I pitched is the story that basically got me the job. It was an origin tale in which, after Steve Austin crashes and the doctors make him a bionic man, his superiors order him to go after a prototype bionic man they had built. The studio executives who were there when I turned in my script said, "If there was one before Steve, then Steve loses his specialness."

That made me laugh. "Specialness." So they weren't enamored with it and went to get a different writer — but they haven't signed one yet, as far as I know. I think that if Superman pans out — and it looks like it's going into production soon — I think that when that happens Universal will reconsider and say, "Let's polish that Six Million Dollar Man script." The only thing they said that really made me happy was, "This movie is too comic-booky."

That made me really happy, because I was about to write Superman. So I was like, "Is it really comic-booky?"

CBG: Why did Warner Bros. pick you to be the Superman writer with your previous film background?

Smith: Basically they had read Chasing Amy, and two executives — both of them were women, one at Warner Brothers and the other at Jon Peters' Company — really liked the script, and, since there was that whole comic-book angle, they were like, "Let's invite him in and talk to him."They gave me the script to read, the one that they had, and asked me, "What do you think?"

I said, "Look, this is bad. The script you have is really (Continues on Page 44)

Grading 'Amy': New Kevin Smith film is worth the chase

By Michael Dean

It's not every day you get to see your name written several feet wide in the opening credits of a major motion picture. The rest of the CBG staff and I recently had that experience after watching a showing of Chasing Amy, which runs its credits sequence amid a montage of mock comic-book panels, covers, and news coverage. (Hoping for just such a spectacle, we had made sure to include all our names on the mock CBG cover we had created for the film.)

Now that that heady thrill has begun to fade, I can report some good news and some bad news. The good news is that critics who hated director Kevin Smith's second feature, Mallrats, have, for the most part, responded favorably to Chasing Amy.

The bad news is that the weaknesses (static camerawork and amateurish acting) that were evident in Clerks, Smith's first work as a feature filmmaker, haven't improved much. Two films after that surprisingly successful debut, Chasing Amy still looks like the work of a gifted beginner instead of a polished film by a Hollywood professional.

The good news is that Chasing Amy doesn't look like a polished film by a Hollywood professional. There is no shortage of high-gloss big-budget productions that never miss a beat. We've seen enough movies about the obsessions of middle-aged Hollywood pros: deals, double-crosses, voyeurism, real estate, institutions, and bureaucracies. What Chasing Amy offers is a fresh perspective, a rough, spontaneous look at things you don't normally see on the big screen. Chasing Amy is the vision of a new generation of filmmakers and it speaks to a new generation of moviegoers. It is about things like negotiating subcultures and telling the truth. It is about the various pitfalls of oral communication (see the Jaws parody scene).

Of course, one of the things you don't normally see represented in the movies (along with lesbian bars and feminist envelope-stuffing sessions) is the world of comics fandom.

It's all here in Chasing Amy: the mixture of carnival and commerce that makes up a comics convention, battling creator egos, and comic books that are expressions of everything from social issues to autobiography to adolescent power fantasies. The scenes that will strike a mainstream audience as the most implausible (such as the violent pseudo-blow-up by the creator of White-Hating Coon) are based on actual events. The film also ponders the mystery raised by Fredric Wertham four decades ago: Exactly what is nature of the relationship between a super-hero and his sidekick? And what about a penciller and his inker? Though they're only a backdrop for the main relationship narrative, there are enough accurate details and small pleasures (like the comics pro cameos) to make a comics fan feel at home.

The bad news is that the film doesn't seem to have found its audience and may have already moved on to the budget cinemas in your area.

The good news is that Chasing Amy is well worth catching wherever it's showing and, if you don't catch it, it should be as effective on video as on the big screen, largely because Smith is such a good writer of funny, realistic dialogue.

The bad news is that Smith is not a good writer of monologues, and Amy is full of them. Where Clerks and Mallrats were comedies with poignant moments, Amy is mostly soul-searching with some comic relief, and the movie's dramatic aspirations lead the characters time and again into long, unconvincing speeches.

The good news is that Smith's next film, the long-promised Dogma, will reportedly be a return to his comic strengths.

The bad news is that, in Chasing Amy, both Brent Frankenhoff's and Cliff Biggers' names appear on the screen nearly a full second longer than my own.

bad, it's terrible and doesn't do justice to this character." I was like, "Please don't make this movie; hire me or don't hire me, just do not make this film — get a better script."

I spent two months being dragged into executives' offices with the two women saying, "Tell them what you told me."

And I'd sit there and say the same thing and two months later they said, "What would you do differently?"

I said, "Well, if I was writing this, I would do this and this." They gave me the job.

CBG: What are we going to see in this film? Will the four Supermen be there?

Smith: There's not nearly enough time to do that. It's kind of an altered tale. You'll definitely hear the best dialogue you've ever heard in a comic-book movie to date.

You know, the 1978 Superman is a great, great flick. The dialogue doesn't touch the dialogue in [my] movie. This movie is smart. It has an attitude — not a hipster attitude, just an attitude. This is the kind of Superman you want to hang out with. This Clark is not a bumbling fool.

CBG: No glasses?

Smith: Of course, glasses. But Lois and Clark's relationship is very different. Lex Luthor is really nifty.

CBG: Is there a Doomsday?

Smith: Superman fights Doomsday, Brainiac, and Lex Luthor, and for 15 minutes there's a huge battle royal.

Doomsday's design is pretty close to the comics. I know there's computer-generated images in the whole thing.

CBG: What do you think of the revamped Superman in the comics?

Smith: I think a year from now it won't matter. We'll be back to the traditional Superman. People keep asking me, "Don't you think it's terrible what they're doing?"

I'm like, they killed him at a point and brought him back. Do you really think they'll leave him like this?

CBG: Is Superman your dream project or is there something else you want to do?

Smith: Actually, Batman is my dream project. There are Batman people and there are Superman people, and I'm a Batman person. Which is probably why I was a good choice to write Superman. I was able to stay true to the origin, stay true to the tone, the character of the comics, and the continuity, as well as being able to write for an audience not comprising comic-book people.

CBG: Is there any possibility of your writing an installment of the Batman movie series?

Smith: The other day, I was at a meeting and they were saying that they had hired a new writer for Batman V. I said, "How come you didn't wait for me?"

They replied, "One franchise at a time. You'll get your shot at Batman." I was cheering.

CBG: You're more of a DC fan than a Marvel fan, right?

Smith: Oh, yeah, all the way. The thing about the new Batman movie is that it looks fantastic but it really has come full circle, because it feels like the old '60s TV show. It's the '60s show with better costumes, but it'll still make a fortune; it'll still do tremendous business. I've heard that there are audiences reportedly cheering the trailer. So Batman & Robin is connecting with somebody.

CBG: Are you working on a possible Grendel project?

Smith: Yeah, we're trying to set up Grendel and Mage at the studios, and, so far, it looks like it might pan out.

CBG: And who are some of the comic-book creators in Chasing Amy*?*

Smith: Mike Allred, who does Madman. Joe Quesada and Jimmy Palmiotti, who do Ash.

CBG: Why do you think there are so many comic books being made into movies?

Smith: Because Hollywood is always looking for a good idea. There's a lot of good ideas in comics; they just don't pan out. A lot of people traditionally think comics are for kids, but I don't see that. I'm 26, comics are still part of my daily routine, but, then again, I don't have a normal routine.

I think that comic-book movies appeal to the inner child in everybody, no matter the age. At one point in your life, you knew about or read comics. I think that's why the studios feel they're a pretty good idea because you can tap almost every market. You get the children and you get the adults.

CBG: Which comic-book movies stand out to you?

Smith: The Rocketeer is the single best comic-book adaption in a movie ever: fantastic, well written, interesting, and very true to the comics.

CBG: How about Superman II*?*

Smith: Superman II, yes. But there were always aspects of Superman in the previous Superman movies that left you saying, "What th—?" In Superman I, spinning the world backward to reverse time was very dumb. It's tough to make an argument and say that something is so unbelievable because the whole movie is about a guy who can fly. You can suspend the belief to a degree, but there is a window, and you can only suspend it so far. That turning back time thing was just a letdown. In Superman II, giving up his powers voluntarily just doesn't work for me. So there are aspects of it that just don't pan out. Superman II, of course, out of all of them, is the best just because he was battling villains of equal strengths. That's the problem with Superman: If he's not fighting some costumed villain or some huge powerhouse, it just doesn't make sense. You want him fighting someone of equal strength.

CBG: What comics are you reading?

Smith: I pretty much read everything that DC puts out and Vertigo.

CBG: Do you have any favorite creators?

Smith: Alan Moore is a fantastic writer. Neil Gaiman. Grant Morrison. John Ostrander, great writer, always has been. Frank Miller, of course. Matt Wagner, I think, is a fantastic writer.

George Khoury, a graduate student at Saint Peter's College, is writing film scripts and a tentative series for Jersey Comics.

The Onion, a satirical mostly weekly newspaper and entertainment guide with its headquarters in Madison, Wis., presented an interview with Chasing Amy director, Superman Lives screenwriter, and new comics-shop owner Kevin Smith in its April 23-29 issue.

Chasing Amy explores the romantic relationship between comic-book artists Holden and Alyssa, in which Holden has a hard time dealing with lesbian experiences in Alyssa's recent past and other incidents in her distant past. Smith told Onion interviewer Keith Phipps the movie is partly based on his own relationship with Joey Lauren Adams, who plays Alyssa. "Holden's issues are very close to my own, or were very close to my own," Smith was quoted as saying. "You know, it comes from that place, that kind of jealous 'come on, man, you had no past before me' place."

He has also written a screenplay that may or may not be used for the upcoming Superman movie. Miramax has since hired Tim Burton to direct the film, and he may bring a different screenwriter to the project. "The dude might want to use Akiva Goldsman, so the man who butchered the Batman franchise can now butcher the Superman franchise, as well," Smith was quoted as saying.

You won't have to believe a man can fly, if Smith's version of Superman is used. Per instructions from producer Jon Peters, Smith said he wrote around any scenes that called for flying. "I just kind of lifted Frank Miller's representation of it from The Dark Knight Returns, which is like a red streak and a sonic boom," Smith told Phipps. "We'll see. We'll see if the quirkmeister doesn't go another way."

Smith said his own goals for the movie were "all about presenting characters as I read them in comics." He described his script as focusing on realistic dialogue and named Miller and Alan Moore as inspirations.

Smith said he had purchased his own comics shop three months ago, then learned the comics industry is "in shambles." Smith, however, is one of the few comics retailers in the business who can afford to lose money. "It doesn't matter to me," Smith told The Onion. "It's just the idea of owning a comic-book store ... Believe me, I'll take the small loss just to have something to call my own."

Asked to compare the movie industry to the comics industry, Smith told Phipps, "I think it's much easier to get an indie film made than to get an indie comic published."

Whereas The Onion's entertainment section is done straight, its straight news section is designed to entertain, with irreverently satirical headlines like "Big, Lovable Dog Resolves Crisis in Zaire." Comics fans were the butt of the joke (again) in a feature story in the same April 23 issue headlined "Comic-Book Store Employee Slated to Talk to Girl."

In the story, a comics fan called a press conference to enthuse about his plans to date a woman for the first time in six years: "The local comics-collecting scene has been abuzz ever since comic-book hobbyist Blaine Thurdlow's announcement Monday that he will spend next Friday evening on a confirmed date with a woman."

The fictitious geek was quoted as saying, "I may not be a slick ladies' man like Lieutenant Commander Riker, but I've seen enough romance between Peter Parker and Gwen Stacy to know a thing or two about love, if you know what I mean."

Thurdlow compared his date, a non-English-speaking Taco Bell employee, to "the sexiest Black Canary full-pager you ever saw. And that's including when Neal Adams was doing the inking, back when Black Canary was a backup feature in the Green Arrow / Green Lantern team-ups from '76 to '78." Thurdlow said he would overcome the language barrier by using "the universal language ... in other words, the nonverbal storytelling abilities of top-notch graphic sequential art."

Special Onion edition: Kevin Smith talks about Superman movie, Chasing Amy, and indies Comics collector talks to girl

Planning to seduce his date with a mint-condition, signed run of "Crisis on Infinite Earths," Thurdlow confessed to a degree of nervousness. "I'm lucky I was never exposed to massive doses of gamma radiation, or else this much adrenaline would surely trigger my transformation into The Incredible Hulk," he was quoted as saying. "Not that I would actually be The Hulk, of course. I would merely be a being similar to The Hulk but lacking the alter ego of scientist Bruce Banner that makes The Hulk uniquely human."

This story was not written by CBG Editor Maggie Thompson's son, Stephen Thompson, although he is the editor of The Onion's entertainment section.

HORROR FROM MA'S ATTIC!

That's right! My old friend Roger went up in his Ma's attic and found a dusty box of 50's Horror Comics! NOTE! Books with (*) before their number Show the effects of unprotected storage! Worn, tan, chipped, dusty, dirty, ETC ! Our prices reflect the wear, so do not expect NM gems. But check these prices - if you want to fill in your runs, every one of these books is complete and fairly solid Good hunting!

200 Comics: $37.50

200 Superhero comics for only $37.50. Why the odd price? POSTAGE IS INCLUDED. All comics are in Fine to Near Mint condition and range from the 70s to now. Your order will contain only superhero books with the majority being Marvels and DCS. This is a great way to spruce up those 50 cent boxes. At these prices we cannot guarantee any specific titles, but we will try to include the best we have available and a few "treasures" to keep you ordering more!

We accept VISA and MasterCard, checks and Money Orders. Credit Card orders sent out within 48 hours. Call Cory Glaberson at (708) 386-6550 between the hours of 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. CST or send order to:

How did Carl Barks celebrate his 96th birthday?

He went to Disney World

It's not everyone who has The Walt Disney Company assign them an official birthday. Carl Barks once said "My official Disney birthday is April 12." Barks' 96th birthday, an official Walt Disney World two-day event, was held at the California Grill at the top of the Contemporary Resort at Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla., beginning April 12. Tickets for the event, limited to 250 people due to restaurant seating, sold out at $200 per person.

Five separate birthday cakes were involved to satisfy separate proceedings. The first cake was served at a breakfast in Barks' suite April 12 for a meeting of Uncle Scrooge Collectors International.

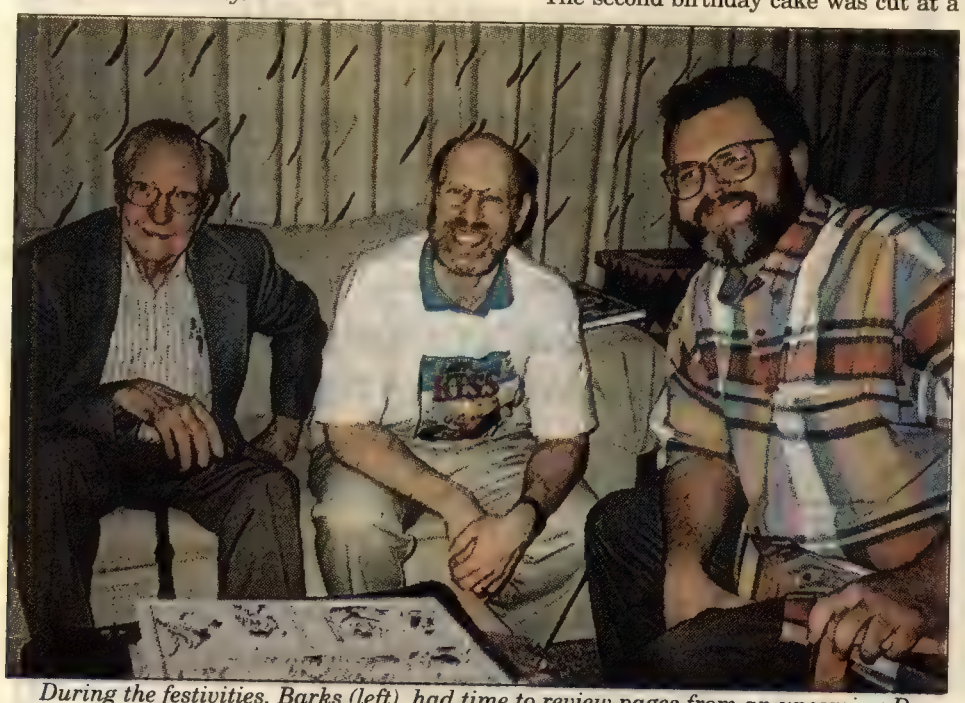
At midmorning, a meeting was held with John Lustig, Pat Block, and European publishers. Lustig and Block have been hired by The Carl Barks Studio to assist Barks in creating a new Donald Duck story — the first in 25 years. Block's original art for the story (Lustig is providing dialogue based on Barks' story ideas)

Barks Studio representative Bill Grandey (standing) helped serve the third of five birthday cakes made for Barks' 96th birthday.

As part of his birthday celebration, Barks put his handprints in cement in a ceremony near the copy of Graumann's Chinese Theater in Disney World's MGM Theme Park.

about Donald in the Alaskan wilderness was on hand for review, and Barks inspected the finished work that followed his previous corrections, adding that he was delighted with Lustig and Block's efforts.

The second birthday cake was cut at a special "Barks Million Dollar Club" lunch sponsored by The Barks Studio.



During the festivities, Barks (left) had time to review pages from an upcoming Donald Duck story that he had provided the idea for. John Lustig (center) and Pat Block (right) are handling the dialogue and art, respectively.

At 1 p.m., Barks' one-man art show opened to event attendees only. It showcased 75 pieces of original art created specially by Barks for the event. A number of Barks Studio items sold out quickly, and the new Donald Duck bronze bust, "Tantrum on the Way," was introduced.

Twenty-five copies of the bust were available at the show and were among the first items to sell out. There will be a total of 200 in the edition priced at $2900. Another 25 were scheduled to arrive at Walt Disney World the first week of May; the busts are handmade and will be delivered in units of 25 until all 200 have been completed. They are available from Walt Disney World mail order at (407) 363-4918 or MGM Animation Gallery at (407) 560-4565.

Most of the Barks pieces exhibited at the show were sold during the event — at prices ranging from $1500 to $7000. Of them, 65 were sold during the show, and the final 10 pieces are available at the MGM Disney Animation Gallery. Other items sold during the show included an art tile featuring Uncle Scrooge entitled "Fifty Stingy Years" and a new serigraph of Uncle Scrooge entitled "I May Have to Spend Some of This Stuff."

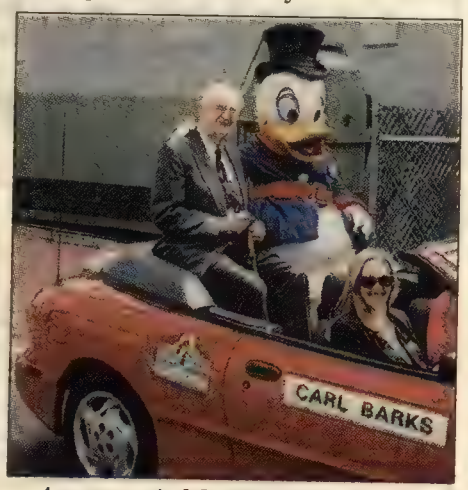
That evening, all the Duck characters were present: Uncle Scrooge, Donald Duck, and Daisy Duck, along with Darkwing Duck and Launchpad. Uncle Scrooge Collectors International President Rev. Ed Bergen gave his "Duckburg Discourse," and the original art for the new Barks birthday pin was presented to Barks. A limited-edition Barks watch, featuring Uncle Scrooge from Barks' original model sheet, was presented to all attendees. The Disney World versions of Uncle Scrooge and Donald Duck helped Barks cut the third cake of the day. The day's festivities, which began at noon, finally wrapped up at 10:30 p.m.

The second day of the event began with The Barks Studio-sponsored breakfast for the two dozen Europeans who had made the trip to be with Barks on his birthday. The fourth cake was served after the breakfast. Two dozen more attendees were invited to join the group an hour later.

At a lunch sponsored by Uncle Scrooge Collectors International, a special committee meeting was held to discuss 1997 events. The fifth birthday cake, an Uncle Scrooge birthday cheesecake, was cut at the lunch.

At 3 p.m., Barks and Uncle Scrooge got in a red Mustang convertible and proceeded from the back lot to MGM's Main Street. Cannons boomed, launching a ticker-tape parade. At the end of the parade, the Walt Disney World Ambassador was waiting at Graumman's Chinese Theater to interview Barks and get his handprints in cement. The crowd numbered about 3000. Barks then went to the MGM Animation Gallery and signed puzzles based on his work and a new hardcover book, Barks Treasury.

After the two-hour event, Barks was seen at the French restaurant in Epcot with Uncle Scrooge Collectors International members celebrating the success of the event. There was no sixth birthday cake; chocolate souffle was substituted, "to the delight of all," according to Barks spokesperson Bill Grandey.



Accompanied by Uncle Scrooge and Barks Studio representative Kathy Morby, Barks rode in a parade held in his honor.

UNLISTED COMICS COLLECTIBLES

By Rex Miller

The past couple of years have been memorable for collectors of comics character memorabilia, with major auction houses offering several unique finds. Butterfield's, Sotheby's, Christie's, and other auction firms have turned up some astonishing comic firsts.

For example, a private premium auction recently sold "the first flag of the comics," an early sendaway of inarguable rarity. Advertised in The Pictorial Review Delineator about the time of Flash Gordon's initial appearance as a strip, it was billed as "Flash Gordon's Own Flag!" The fabric premium was sold together with a full page newsprint ad from the September 1934 issue of The Delineator.

Across the top of the 21¾" x 17" full-color offer, Krazy Kat, Popeye, and other characters including Flash Gordon bracket The Katzenjammer Kids, who shout "Hooray! We comic people have a flag!"

"Boys! Girls!" the ad's headline shouted, "Let us send you the first flag of the comics! Read below how you can get one ..."

"The comics are marching. Their parade daily and weekly enters millions of welcoming homes. And yet the comics have had no flag. The children who love them have had no banner to wave for Popeye, Flash Gordon, or Krazy Kat. But now, boys and girls, you can own such a flag." The copy to the left of a large depiction of the flag, which was shown with grommet holes around it — not an aspect of the actual premium — described the sendaway.

"Pictorial-Review-Delineator has created a national flag of the comics. It is shown on this page. Its actual size is 13 inches by 17 inches. It is made of good quality muslin."

"All that you need do to own one of these gay banners is to buy a copy of [the paper] at any newsstand, tear out the coupon on Page 78, fill in plainly your name and address, and mail with 10 cents (stamps or coin) to Editor, Pictorial Review-Delineator, 57th Street at Eighth Avenue, New York, NY."

Art below showed an adult buying the publication, turning to the correct page, and cutting out the coupon. "We will promptly send you the gay, exciting flag of the Comics," the ad promised. "Because of mailing difficulties, no stick will be sent, but it can be easily fastened to a stick or cord.

"Celebrate the comics! Lift this flag to the breeze. Hang it on your wall. Raise it in your yard. Fly it in your camp. Use it for a pillow cover — lasting portraits of Popeye, Tillie the Toiler, Jiggs and Mrs. Jiggs, Toots and Casper, Little Annie Rooney, Katzenjammer Kids, Flash Gordon, Barney Google, and Krazy Kat — send for your flag today."

Comic strip and Big Little Book collectors will easily identify many of the classic images shown. Interestingly, the colors of the flag are different from those in the premium ad for several of the strip panels.

A find of similar importance is a sign dated 1940 advertising the first appearance of a magazine version of the Superman radio serial.

"Beginning This Month Radio and Television Mirror Brings You The Adventures Of Superman In Radio." A line drawing of a fully-grown Superman, posed with a large rocketship and sun in the background, accompanied the text: "Now for the first time, the newest hero of the air comes to you as a thrilling story. Read the daring exploits of Clark Kent, Superman, each month ... Tune in to the Superman broadcasts on stations coast to coast. Check Local Listings For Time and Station."

The existing sign poses several questions, such as why no sponsor tie-in was mentioned. (The copyright line read, "© Superman, Inc., 1940.") Why the cumbersome phrase "Superman In Radio" rather than "On Radio?"

The first Superman broadcasts were in 1939, sponsored by Horlick's Malted. By 1941 the show had been picked up in some markets by Hecker's H-O, a milling company, and various regional sponsors. Some time prior to 1943 and the Kellogg's era, Superman was briefly sponsored by the Quaker Oats Company, but it seems likely the 1940 Superman was in a sponsorship hiatus when Macfadden Publications Inc. first serialized the radio program in its magazine.

Copies of the magazine containing this feature survive in various collections. It was still running in 1941, and collector Larry Zdeb has a copy of the publication with a masthead and cover date of September 1941, with the "Superman In Radio" still in place. In this issue, which may have included the final appearance of the Superman stories, there was no further mention of the radio show, but three panels of art depicting Superman battling a octopus accompanied the text.

These are representative of the kinds of rare collectibles that do not appear in most reference books or price guides. Numerically, many are more scarce than Action Comics #1.

Mighty Mouse's color portrait from Terry-Toons Comics #66 may not be as universally desirable as a pinback from Wonder Woman's Sensation Comics or The Flash, but fewer of this rare sendaway are thought to exist. Matted and framed between similar premium pictures of Captain Marvel (1941), and the first Superman portrait (1942), the supermouse makes a powerful statement, indeed.

Some of the most beautiful and elusive comic-hero art can be found in the form of ultra-rare galley proofs: a set of labels designed to adorn a box of 1949 Superman socks was recently sold for $979.25. Properly framed, such memorabilia automatically doubles in value, especially when the provenance is known and only one or two examples are believed to have survived.

The Silver Age Theory of Relativity: A quiz

"Happy families are all alike," a great man once said. "Every unhappy family is unhappy in its own way." Those words come from the Russian novelist Leo Tolstoi, but they just as easily could have been muttered by Hal Jordan while hoisting a few brews with Black Bolt.

"And before you skim down looking for him, here's a promise: There are no questions about Mike Murdock."
— Craig Shutt

Because back in the Silver Age, if you had family, you had trouble. It's bad enough that kids and wives had a nagging tendency to die or go insane, but you had to keep a close eye on other random family members, too. Let's not even get into all of Superboy's secret or forgotten brothers and sisters, both by blood and by adoption.

Remember those relatively aggravating folks? I hope so, because it's time for another pop quiz. Keep in mind, for every annoying relative listed, a dozen more wait in the wings for next time. You know there'll be a next time.

And before you skim down looking for him, here's a promise: There are no questions about Mike Murdock.

1. Why did Mera's twin sister visit Earth?
   - a. She came to warn her sister of dire peril.
   - b. She wanted Mera to return to their dimension.
   - c. She'd been banished from their dimension.
   - d. She wanted Aquaman to double his fun.
2. Who was Clea's uncle?
   - a. Dormammu
   - b. Eternity
   - c. Umar
   - d. The Ancient One
3. Who was the ancestor of the Legion's hated Tornado Twins?
   - a. The Red Tornado
   - b. The Flash
   - c. The Weather Wizard
   - d. The Whizzer
4. Whose evil deeds was The Black Knight avenging when he joined The Avengers?
   - a. His father's
   - b. His uncle's
   - c. His brother's
   - d. Roy Thomas'
5. Who first learned Lena Thorul's terrible secret?
   - a. Supergirl
   - b. Jimmy Olsen
   - c. Lois Lane
   - d. Her husband

Answer Key:

1. Why did Mera's twin sister visit Earth?

Answer c: She'd been banished from their dimension.

Yes, indeed, Mr. Silver Age's little heart beat just a bit faster the day he picked up Aquaman #22 (Jul-Aug 65) and learned that the delectable Mera had an equally scrumptious twin sister named Hila.

Aquaman, the lucky buck, had the distinct pleasure of learning of her existence when he spotted his apparent wife among some seaweed. He scooped her up and gave her a big smack on the lips.

"Wait!" he exclaimed. "You're not Mera!"

"No," Hila cooed. "But let's not stop, handsome!"

"Take your hands off my husband, sister!" Mera demanded, riding up on her seahorse. Considering who was doing the handling here, Aquaman's luck has got to rival Longshot's.

Hila was the black sheep of Mera's family. She and her beau Kandor — I'm not lying! — had been banished from Mera's dimension years earlier. Now, she said she had repented and wanted her sister's help in freeing herself from Kandor's grasp.

I'm sorry to say that that was something of a fib. In fact, before the day was over, she'd double-crossed everyone in the story at least once. But take one look at that face and tell me you don't forgive her.

2. Who was Clea's uncle?

Answer a: Dormammu.

The fetching Clea, Doc Strange's main squeeze, wins the award for having the No. 1 family you do not want to invite over for Thanksgiving. Sure, Black Bolt's clan had a few bad apples, but they didn't compare to Clea's uncle, The Dread Dormammu, most powerful of the dwellers in the realm of darkness! Clea's mother, Umar, and her father, Prince Orini (Dormammu's ward when Umar seduced him), were no day at the beach, either.

So how did the doc get tangled up with a bunch that made Thor's family look good? It began when The Ancient One dispatched the Master of the Mystic Arts into "The Domain of the Dread Dormammu!" in Strange Tales #126 (Nov 64).

Impressed by the doc's nobility and courage, Clea tried to warn him about how cranky her uncle could be about trespassers. Stephen appreciated her concern but explained that he was sworn to fight evil, and you know how that is. The fetching Clea wound up imprisoned for this familial lapse. But Steve managed to convince Dormammu to free her before the doc boogied on outta there in the next issue. Unfortunately, he forgot to ask her name or — even more importantly — if her last name might also be Dormammu.

It wasn't until "The End — at Last!" in Strange Tales #146 (Jul 66) that the doc freed Clea from her other-dimensional banishment and put the kibosh on Dormammu for good. (Yeah, right.)

Lena Thorul had a secret, but it wasn't the one Dick Malverne thought in Action Comics #296 (Jan 63). So ask yourself this: Who first learned her real secret, and just how dim is Mr. Silver Age for showing a Supergirl panel here?

Jumping fishhooks, what more could Mr. Silver Age ask from a comic book than for it to reveal that Mera had a twin sister? Why did Hila decide to come visit our happy undersea couple in Aquaman #22 (Jul-Aug 65)?

The Tornado Twins bedeviled the Legion in Adventure Comics #373 (Oct 68). They weren't really bad, they were just drawn that way in this story — for a reason related to their relative! Who was their 20th century ancestor?

Despite his empathy for bad guys who turn good and join the Avengers, Hawkeye shot first and asked questions later in "The Black Knight Lives Again!" in Avengers #48 (Jan 68). What relative's evil was BK avenging?

RELATIVES

Doc finally got around to asking what the heck her name was and why she'd risked her life for him. "There is much pleasure in speaking my name to you, Dr. Strange," she purred. "It is Clea! Your other question must wait!"

Wouldn't you have said the same in her relative position? Fortunately, the doc learned the truth before he sent out his holiday invitations.

3. Who was the ancestor of the Legion's hated Tornado Twins?

Answer b: The Flash.

These were (are? will be?) the guys responsible for The Legion's XS and Flash's pal Impulse being cousins. You — and The Legion — know them as Don and Dawn Allen. The Legion wasn't smart enough to figure out the connection, but we are, because the caption called them the Fun Loving Allen Super-Heroes. Get it?

The Legion didn't take a shine to these guys, because Don and Dawn really annoyed them. Every time our pals 'n' gals turned around, D&D beat them to the scene of the crime and hogged all the action — and glory. But they refused an offer to join The Legion!

Just when The Legion was getting really depressed from the bad publicity, the Allens revealed their secret: They were representatives of the Barry Allen Memorial Institute and direct descendants of Barry his own self. Since the UP had declared that day Flash Day, they were generating publicity for the group.

"We decided the best way to publicize Flash Day would be to remind the world of his greatness by recreating his powers in ourselves!" Don explained. So their gene patterns were altered — temporarily, I might add — to give them super speed.

"By beating you out, Legionnaires, we got plenty of publicity! Now our powers are gone, though, so thanks for being good sports about it!" So I'm still a little hazy on how XS and Bart got their powers. But, then, it still makes my head hurt to think about how Don and Dawn wound up being descended from Barry.

4. Whose evil deeds was The Black Knight avenging when he joined The Avengers?

Answer b: His uncle's.

Many villainous super-folks have changed sides and joined The Avengers through the years. But this time, it was the nephew of the original villainous Black Knight. The first version tumbled to his death while fighting Iron Man high in the sky in "My Life or Yours!" in Tales of Suspense #73 (Jan 66). Guess we know who won that offer.

But that wasn't the end of things, as we learned two years later in "The Black Knight Lives Again!" in Avengers #48 (Jan 68). As Prof. Nathan Garrett lay dying, he called his nephew, Dr. Dane Whitman of the Willowton Research Center. When Dane arrived, Garrett implored him to use the professor's research to do good.

Dane agreed, swearing that Garrett would someday be remembered as a benefactor to mankind. He picked up his uncle's lance and sword, created a second winged stallion to replace the original, and finally headed off to join The Avengers. Needless to say, The Avengers took a little convincing. But with Magneto holding Wanda and Pietro hostage, our Assemblers didn't have a lot of time to stand around and apologize when they realized their mistake.

"I've got a hunch we haven't seen the last of the new Black Knight!" Giant-Man said in the end.

"I hope not!" replied The Wonderful Wasp. "I'll bet he's cute under that nutty helmet."

Man, I miss those days.

5. Who first learned Lena Thorul's terrible secret?

Answer c: Lois Lane.

You can't keep any secrets around our intrepid newshound, except for maybe that one really big one. Inadvertent as it was, Lois forced Lex Luthor to admit he had a secret sister in "The Curse of Lena Thorul!" in Superman's Girlfriend Lois Lane #23 (Feb 61). Lois was writing about witchcraft in the New England town of Cardiff and realized that the town librarian looked like one of the area's original witches. When Lois decided to include Lena in her article, weird things started happening: Camera and typewriters vanished in a puff of smoke, books crumbled, etc.

Finally, Superman arrived to warn Lois that Lex had escaped from prison, and Lois told him of her suspicions that Lena was a witch. Superman poohpoohed them, a strange reaction from a guy who hung around with Circe and Mr. Mxyzptlk.

They tracked Lex to his lair and discovered he had been keeping tabs on Lena and preventing Lois from writing about her. When he refused to say why, Superman solved the mystery by writing the anagrammatic solution on a handy blackboard while Lois stood nearby, agog.

What a big secret: How many readers hadn't learned to rearrange the letters every time somebody had a weird last name? It almost always worked, except with Steve Ditko characters. Those names were weird just for the heck of it.

If you guessed Supergirl was first, you missed it by nearly two years. Kara didn't discover the truth until she went back in time to uncover the identity of Lena's parents in "The Girl with the X-Ray Mind" in Action Comics #295 (Dec 62). I guess it had never occurred to her cousin to let her in on this juicy bit of gossip.

It just goes to show: Even villains weren't free of having relatives they didn't want the world to know about back in the Silver Age.

Scoring:

5: Excellent! You could be related to Brainiac, which until recently took some real doing but wasn't impossible.

4: Really Good! You could be related to Bruce Wayne — that is, Batman's cousin and namesake, the private detective, who could solve any mystery. Almost.

3: Pretty Good! You could be related to Susie Thompkins, Lois Lane's niece — the daughter of Lois' long-forgotten other sister.

2: Not So Good! You could be related to Iris Allen's dad, Prof. West, who knew a lot but tended to forget most of it.

1: Not Good at All! You could be related to Mon-El, who had good intentions when he thought he was Superboy's brother but had most of his facts wrong.

0: Really Bad! You could learn a lesson from Angel O'Day and her half-sister Athena, aka Dumb Bunny, whose motto on quizzes like this is: Always choose "b."

Parting was such sweet sorrow for Dr. Strange and the fetching Clea, as the dust settled on "The End — at Last!" in Strange Tales #146 (Jul 66). The doc didn't learn his new babe's lineage, but he knows it now. Who was her uncle?

"There are no dead students here ... this week."

— Principal Snyder, played by Armin Shimmerman in Buffy the Vampire Slayer

"I'm not Tim Silver, but I can certainly relate to his plight."

— Tony Isabella

I realize that I devoted the whole of last week's column to my new favorite television series, Buffy the Vampire Slayer. However, I would be grievously remiss in my duties as the herald of spiffy entertainment if I didn't bring to your attention the "Invisible Girl" episode that aired the week of May 19.

Besides yet another great line delivered by Armin Shimmerman, better known for his role as "Quark" on Star Trek: Deep Space Nine, the episode boasted marvelous performances by Sarah Michelle Gellar (Buffy) and Charisma Carpenter (Cordelia), a poignant script, and a bona fide chiller of an ending. It's a great live-action comic book and I know of no higher compliment I can pay Creator-Producer Joss Whedon, who also supplied the story for the episode.

☞ My comics-reading habits have changed drastically in the past several months. I used to read the new comics in more or less alphabetical order and rarely fell more than a week or so behind.

My stint as an Eisner judge, along with family and personal matters, made it necessary for me to alter this routine. Now that my time is again more my own, I'm running five or six months behind on some titles and reading them in batches. It's an interesting experience. Here's what I've read lately.

☞ Batman brings out the very best in writer Jeph Loeb. His work for Marvel Comics is, at best, journeyman, and, at worst, as in Rob Liefeld's wretched Captain America, simply awful. But in Batman: The Long Halloween, collaborating with artist Tim Sale, Loeb kicks sequential-art butt.

The Long Halloween is an incredibly ambitious effort. It's a 13-issue story with each part taking place one month after the last and involving a holiday. It's a complicated murder mystery featuring a large cast of characters. Although the chapters don't always fit together seamlessly, they do leave the reader wanting to see what happens next. Along with Akiko and Kurt Busiek's Astro City, it's one of the titles that seem likely to work their way to the top of my reading pile every month.

I won't be waiting for the inevitable Long Halloween trade paperback to reread this one. As soon as the 13th and final issue is in my eager little hands, I figure on sitting back in a comfy chair and enjoying the story from start to finish. This is good comics, kids. I recommend it highly.

☞ Curse of the Spawn isn't my cup of tea, but, that said, I also have to say that it's got a heck of a lot going for it. The basic rationale of the title is to tell stories that don't feature the Al Simmons Spawn. So the first four issues introduced the Spawn of 400 years in the future, and the next four featured private investigators Sam and Twitch, who appear regularly in the original Spawn title. All eight issues to date have been written by Spawn cartoon and film writer Alan McElroy and drawn by Dwayne Turner and Danny Miki.

McElroy is a terrific writer. He's a little wordy for my tastes but he's good. Of the two stories presented in Curse thus far, I liked the second better. I'm a sucker for cop stories, even though I think the police corruption shown in this particular tale is hard to swallow. But, since it's a horror story, as well, I'll cut McElroy some slack.

I love the drawing by Turner and Miki. It's gorgeously grotesque and a pleasure to behold. I only wish their storytelling was better. It's often difficult to figure out what's going on in some panels — and also from panel to panel. They're very good; they could be great.

Curse of the Spawn may not be for me, but I think it's worth checking out. It may be just what you're looking for.

☞ I knew sitting down with the first seven issues of JLA that it was going to be a hard sell for me. I'm not particularly fond of much of Grant Morrison's writing and, with rare exception, I don't believe British writers are compatible with the classic super-hero icons. (The most notable exceptions are, of course, Alan Moore and James Robinson.) Call me jingoistic, but I think super-heroes are something we Americans do better than anyone else.

Cutting to the chase, Morrison made that hard sale. JLA is a fun series. It's a good and sometimes even great story with clever dialogue and pretty nice characterization. The Howard Porter and John Dell artwork is exciting, if a bit garish.

Some of my Usenet correspondents swear by this title and I can see why. The first story arc was pretty good, once we got by the clumsy bouncing of the departing roster. The single-issue Tomorrow Woman tale suffered, because it should never have been a Done-in-One story, especially given how much space in that issue was devoted to a membership drive that we've seen dozens of times in various Legion of Super-Heroes comics.

(Digression: JLA #5 contains one of the dumbest scenes I've seen. Tommy "Hitman" Monaghan applies for membership and tells the gathered heroes that he's a paid assassin. Given the questionable nature of his occupation, Hitman's appearance here was nothing more than a bad joke. Morrison may have found it amusing, but I'm from the "kill your darlings" school of writing. If it doesn't fit, you must omit — or something like that.)

The current storyline features renegade angels tearing up the world. It's a touch "mystical" for me but still enjoyable. The "good" renegade angel Zauriel is an interesting, witty character, and I look forward to seeing what Morrison does with him.

We all know there have been a lot of bad Justice League comics over the years, but, if you're not completely soured on the basic concept, give JLA and Morrison a try.

I saved the best two comics for last.

☞ Ka-Zar by Mark Waid and Andy Kubert has everything I like best in an action-adventure series. It stars characters I care about, characters who can grow, and it allows them to speak with their own distinctive voices. It has thrills and spills and gut-churning cliffhangers. It has exhilarating artwork. It even gives me something to think about, as it explores the effect of even minor technology on The Savage Land, where our heroes dwell. Every issue leaves me wishing I already had the next issue.

Ka-Zar is that old Marvel magic, back to thrill us anew. I'm 13 years old again.

☞ Timothy B. Silver, the hero of Jim Valentino's remarkable A Touch of Silver, is somewhat younger. He's in the fourth grade and his life isn't always pleasant. His father can be brutal, his mother can be less than understanding, and the parents of his friends can be downright cruel. But there is kindness and joy in his world, much of the latter coming from his love for the colorful heroes he reads about in his favorite comic books.

I'm not Tim Silver, but I can certainly relate to his plight.

I was both the shortest and smartest kid in most of my classes at Sts. Philip and James Elementary School. I was one of the very few Italian kids in the neighborhood. In other words, I was a walking target for every stupid bully for miles around.

I got beat up at least once a month for most of my elementary school career, mostly because I didn't back down. Ever. I cried when I got hurt and I got yelled at for not walking away from the fights. But, you know, that would have been worse.

Eventually, I got to the point where, through sheer weight of experience at being beaten up, I was able to do some damage to the bullies and even win a few fights. After that, the fights leveled off considerably. It wasn't as much fun for them.

The comic books were my refuge. Bullies always got what was coming to them in comic books. Good guys always won. I understand now that the real world wasn't any more like that then than it is today. But those comic books gave me hope.

A Touch of Silver is about struggle, but it is also about the dreams and hopes of a young man. It's a moving, sometimes painful, story. It's also one of the very best comic books on the stands: emotionally gripping, masterfully written and drawn, and enormously satisfying. It's a must-read if ever there was one.

More reviews next time. See you then.

Another feather

With the publication in 1995 of R. F. Outcault's The Yellow Kid, Kitchen Sink Press put yet another feather in its cap as one of the foremost publishers of historically significant tomes in the field of cartooning.

Produced in time to help celebrate the centennial of the newspaper comic strip, KSP's Yellow Kid is a monumental publishing achievement. Available in either hardback (for $55) or paperback ($39.95), the book reprints in absolutely first-rate full color all of the famed Yellow Kid cartoons that Outcault did for the New York World and the New York Journal 1895-1898. Also included are The Yellow Kid's cameo appearances in Outcault's later hit strip, Buster Brown, and the prose "diary" feature (for which Outcault did black-and-white illustrative spot drawings) in which The Kid discusses his adventures while touring in Europe in the winter of 1897.

Thanks to KSP, we can now see for the first time anywhere the complete run of the cartoon feature that established comics as a commercially important part of the American newspaper, thereby opening the floodgates through which the entire history of American newspaper comics subsequently flowed. To have this evidence before us in such a superb state as we have here is a luxury of unprecedented proportions for all scholars and fans of the medium.

Virtually all of the newspaper clippings from which the book's contents are reproduced were furnished by the San Francisco Academy of Comic Art, and its curator, the redoubtable Bill Blackbeard, provides an exhaustive introduction that consumes 150 of the book's 300 pages.

Although an introduction of this dimension seems excessive, it is, actually, not. Blackbeard's lengthy text is, in effect, an elaborate and essential annotation on the Yellow Kid cartoons. He discusses the newspaper circulation war between William Randolph Hearst's Journal and Joseph Pulitzer's World in which The Yellow Kid figured so prominently for a time: the popularity of The Kid was such that Hearst lured Outcault away from Pulitzer to get The Kid, whereupon Pulitzer quickly commissioned another artist to produce The Yellow Kid for his paper. Thus, for most of the life of The Yellow Kid, there were two — one in each paper; and the papers ballyhooed The Yellow Kid all over town to attract readers. And Outcault often refers to the rival Kid in his cartoons.

Blackbeard also discusses other social and political events of the period which are referred to or glanced at in Outcault's cartoons. Without Blackbeard's guidance here, we could scarcely appreciate Outcault's work for the topical and engaging enterprise it was.

Blackbeard's contribution to this project, then, is doubly important: he not only supplied most of the Yellow Kid cartoons, but he provided the kind of insight that makes the cartoons enjoyable even a century after they were first published.

Helpful — indeed, vital — as Blackbeard's text is, it also embodies the only flaws in the book. Blackbeard's shortcoming as a scholar and historian is his propensity to engage in speculation without clearly identifying his musings as imaginative, rather than factual. He is likely to begin a passage by saying that the cause of a particular event "may be" this or that, but by the end of the passage, he has forgotten the "may be" and is speaking authoritatively about what definitely "was."

And sometimes, he fails to signal at all that he has just ventured into an arena that is entirely the product of his speculative imagination. Such imprecision is a trick of semantics rather than a deliberate deception, but the result is the same. Some of the conclusions he draws by this means are brilliant and insightful; others are wildly improbable.

Ironically, Blackbeard is critical of the narrative technique of the venerable comics historian Coulton Waugh, saying Waugh's "lack of documentation" makes it "difficult to disprove" any of his contentions. And then Blackbeard commits precisely the same sin.

For instance, when the Hearst-Pulitzer circulation war resulted in both papers reducing their price from 2¢ to a penny, Blackbeard says (without a shred of cited documentation) that newspaper buyers promptly started buying both papers! They discovered, Blackbeard says, that they could buy both papers for the price they'd been paying for only one. So, naturally, they bought both.

I doubt it.

I doubt that readers were "delighted" (as Blackbeard claims) to continue spending 2¢ a day even if they got two papers for their money. The readers of these papers were, for the most part, poor immigrants. They didn't have pennies to fritter away on newspapers. I think they probably saved the extra penny and spent it on booze and dissolute living.

You'll notice in the foregoing sentence that I've clearly indicated the speculative character of my utterance by saying "I think" at the beginning. Blackbeard seldom provides us with a signal as clear as this. The entire newspapering situation at the time flies in the face of Blackbeard's idle speculation. The whole purpose of reducing the price of a newspaper is to seduce people into buying that paper because it is cheaper than its rival. (The Hearst and Pulitzer papers wound up costing exactly the same, but this wasn't the first time a newspaper price war had resulted in a similar standoff. It happened all the time.)

If Blackbeard's speculation is true, then he has uncovered a "fact" that will subsequently rewrite the history of daily journalism in America. Not to mention the economic theories of capitalism and free enterprise.

One of Blackbeard's most inspired speculations is his assertion that the expression "yellow journalism" did not originate with The Yellow Kid (who was the most obvious symbol of the battle of sensationalism that Hearst and Pulitzer fought and, hence, the inspiration for the term). Blackbeard's contention, however, is highly debatable.

As evidence, he quotes the phrase as used in an editorial published in September 1896 — while there was still only one Yellow Kid (in Pulitzer's World) and, hence, before the actual rivalry between two Yellow Kids could have imparted to the combatant papers the nom de guerre "yellow kid journals" or "yellow journals" (from which, we suppose, the phrase "yellow journalism" emerged).

But the editorial in question is berating Hearst's self-serving publicity stunt, a bike race dubbed "The Yellow Fellow Transcontinental Bicycle Relay." Blackbeard labors extravagantly to find a reason for Hearst using the "yellow fellow" epithet for the competition. But none of his reasons are as persuasive as the obvious: At the time, Hearst had not secured the services of Outcault and, lacking The Yellow Kid as a lure for readers, he did the next best thing: He invented a parallel term for a spectacular stunt, seeking by approximate imitation to cash in on The Yellow Kid's popularity.

So even if the editorial that launched the expression "yellow journalism" preceded the actual rivalry between the two Yellow Kids, the expression, based upon the "yellow fellow" race, was inspired, once-removed, by Outcault's Yellow Kid.

Fortunately, Blackbeard's unsubstantiated speculations and convoluted arguments occur only rarely in his introduction. While comics scholarship might be momentarily disrupted by such indulgences, his text is still an excellent guide to appreciation of the Yellow Kid cartoons that compose the real treasure in this volume.

The only Outcault Yellow Kid material missing from the book are the covers the cartoonist did for a humor magazine named after the feature and such drawings as he did for gum cards, buttons, and other merchandise. But these images are also available from KSP — in a box of 36 full-color trading cards, annotated by Outcault scholar Richard Olson ($10.95).

Comics MIA

We have received confirmation that the following titles listed in previous MIA sections have shipped: Strangehaven #6 from Abiogenesis and Dandy Lion from Fantagraphics. This reflects shipping information received through May 23.

Also, Howard J. Michaels Jr. reminded us that Murder Can Be Fun #5 (Feb) was resolicited for May shipping and has been appearing in our May listings. Our thanks to Howard and everyone else who called or wrote with updates.

The following comics were scheduled to ship approximately 30 or more days ago; however, we have not been able to confirm that they have actually been released, nor, as far as we have been able to determine, have they been rescheduled. If you have any of the issues listed below, please let us know. We'd especially appreciate it if you could include the information we need to list the comic book in the CBG Price Guide. From the indicia of the comic book: The full title, issue number, month, and year, as well as the U.S. price given on the cover.

New comics scheduled to ship in June

These are comics scheduled to ship during the month of June that, to the best of our knowledge, have not yet had specific release dates announced. Crossed-out titles have been reported as shipped. Be aware that comics can take two or three days to reach retailers once they are shipped, so comics that are shipped at the end of the month may not appear in your local store until early the following month.

Canada's Premiere Comic and Specialty Store.

This section features listings for retail comics stores around the world. Traveling comics collectors of all types search for new stores to dig through on their vacations, business trips, etc. Advertise your establishment here, including approximately ten words of miscellaneous description, for only $3.50 an issue. You can buy this space in increments of 26 or 52 issues, for $91.00 or $182.00 respectively. Send in your store name, address, phone number, and approximately ten words of description, along with your payment. If you stock Comics Buyer's Guide we'll put your listing in boldface type.

☐ 1 year $182.00 (52 issues) ☐ 6 months $91.00 (26 issues)

Send your listing with payment to: Comics Buyer's Guide 700 E. State St., Iola, WI 54990-0001 or call 715-445-2214

SUPER TRADERS

Super Trader ads are available for $108.00 each. Super Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 5" x 5" size. Super Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Super Trader ads.

High-Grade Silver-Age DCs For Sale

A. Books from the Calvin Slobodian collection (purchased by him off of the newsstand) and recently acquired by me. I collect high grade DC hero books through 1965. These represent 1966-on from a beautiful collection, plus a few non-hero books. They are exceptional with white pages. Books highlighted by a ★ are killer copies, pedigree quality (high gloss), priced at a double NM Overstreet. Others priced as marked. All are nice.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

Water-damaged Golden Age

A nice collection of GOLDEN AGE books from January 1942 to September 1943, with whiter than white pages and extreme gloss. IF these weren't damaged by water, it is my opinion that they would rival the Edgar Church collection for gloss and whiteness of page quality. Generally, damage is limited to heavy foxing in a 1/2" strip along the top, leading and bottom edges of the books. Rest of the book is vf or better.

TRUE STORIES OF ADULT FILM STARS
Told By The Stars Themselves

LIVE IN PERSON!

Unlike some companies, we don't do lame rip-off "nude variant" covers that cost ten bucks! Nor do we hire half nekkid girls who have nothing to do with a comic, just play someone else's character at in-person promotions. How cheezy and desperate is that?! Don't fall for it! The Girls of Carnal Comics co-write and star in their own comic book creations, and when you see one at a convention or comic shop, you can be sure they're the REAL DEAL! REAL SUPERSTARS! REAL LIVE! REAL SEXY!

BOMBASTIC has monsters, magic, mayhem, mirth, perils, pratfalls, pugnacious protagonists and a little thing called... FUN!! Try it on for size. I guarantee it won't shrink, tear or fade.

BOMBASTIC BUZZ

"Brian Clopper's BOMBASTIC gives you the most bang for your buck! Over-the-top art, absolutely funny, a rib splitting class act He makes me green with envy!"
Chris Yambar (Mr. Beat)

"The most aptly named comic I know of. The enthusiasm on the page is contagious."
Jenni Gregory (Dreamwalker)

"Brian's got four separate stories in four distinct genres (space comedy, weirdness family symbolism, superhero parody and fantasy) and he does them all with great humor (and pathos, where it's needed), distinctive characters and a nice sense of pacing."
Elayne Wechsler-Chaput (Rec.arts.comics.misc.)

BOMBASTIC #1, #2 and #3 are available individually for $3.25 each (postage paid) or you can order the first three issues for only $9.00 and receive a free artprint signed by Brian Clopper. Send checks to: Brian Clopper, 21 Valley Park Court, Damascus, Maryland 20872. Look for BOMBASTIC #4 in the new Diamond catalog (August comics)

Trader Tips

The Trader ads in CBG are an easy and economical way to advertise. Simply design your ad in a space that is 8½" wide by 8½" high and send it along with payment ($40.00 per Trader space) and complete reference form to:

COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE
Advertising Department
700 E. State Street
Iola, WI 54990-0001

We'll reduce your ad to the proper size and place it in the issue(s) you request. If no specific issue(s) is requested, we'll run your ad in the next available issue.

Keep in mind that CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or symbols to Trader ads. The better your ad looks when you send it to us, the better it will look when it is reduced and published in CBG.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

But I Digress

home with smokers, they choke on the poisonous exhaust given off by a marriage in flames.

But that's nothing compared to what happens next. Pardon the phrasing of the following since I don't want to give away everything: The argument reaching a crisis point, one of the parents decides that he or she is leaving, and they explode into the boy's room, demanding that Tim choose between them.

It's a hideous sequence — hideous in that you have a feeling that, if little sister is destined for a psychiatrist's couch, big brother might end up on top of an office building rearranging people's chest cavities with a high-powered rifle. What we're seeing here is nothing less than a child being scarred for life. "Who do you love more?" is the explosive question with which Tim is hammered. He stammers out a name, and you get the sense that it's hardly the name of the parent he feels a closer bond to, but rather the parent he's more afraid of upsetting. Or perhaps Tim was simply trying to get out a sentence that would be a plea to his folks not to put him in this ghastly predicament, and he never managed to get beyond the first word of the sentence before being snatched away.

Issue #5 gives us something of a respite from the emotional shellacking that Valentino puts us and his protagonist through, as Tim tries to adapt to a new life, bereft of one of his parents. It's by far the most involved comic-book tie-in, as Tim projects his wish-fulfillment self into a story that beautifully evokes the style and substance of typical 1963 comics (DC-style, Marvel-style, and Alan Moore-style.)

Tim, feeling isolated and unwanted, conjures up a daydream in which his alterego, Silverboy, is sought after by teams evocative of The Legion, The Fantastic Four, and The Justice League (right down to the classic JLA-style shot that has them running towards camera with their names in captions.)

Symbolically recreating his parents' struggle for his affections, the three teams go at each other in a physical battle to capture Silverboy's loyalties. And Silverboy — in the mindset of a child who just wishes his life could be normal — desperately wants all the teams to just be friends with each other instead of battling. Fighting over him is anathema. Deep down, we sense that Tim — like most kids who are victims of divorce — believes that he is responsible for the break-up of his parents' marriage, and that he and he alone can somehow bring them together.

Would that life were as simple as a 1963-era comic book.

Displaying inventiveness and a deep-seated love for the genre that I haven't seen from Valentino since normalman, A Touch of Silver goes light years beyond that in terms of being a personal and important piece of work. Comics parody is one thing. Silver gives us the life of a young boy wherein comic books become not only his hobby and then his love, but also his link to sanity. Like Howard the Duck, Tim Silver is trapped in a world he never made, and comics are his means of survival. In the comics world, he can work out the difficulties in his life that he otherwise would not have the emotional tools to express. Tim is about as far removed from the view of a fan with a bloodless collector's mentality as one can get.

The characters are multidimensional, the situations achingly real, and the emotional palpable in every pen stroke on the black and white page.

I would highly recommend this series even if I hadn't tortured Jim Valentino's assistant. (There. That's an even better pull quote.)

Peter David, writer of stuff. can be written to at To Be Continued, Inc., P.O. Box 239, Bayport, NY 11705. You could write to Jim Valentino there as well, but that would be silly, because he's not there.

The advertisers' index is provided as a reader service. Occasional last minute changes may result in ads appearing on pages other than those listed here. The publisher assumes no liability for omissions or errors.

GENERAL INFORMATION

A. PAYMENT: Ads must be accompanied by payment. You may pay with a check, money order, or credit card.

B. CREDIT CARDS: We will accept the following credit cards: VISA, MasterCard, American Express, Discover.

C. DEADLINE: For all advertising is 4:00 p.m. each Tuesday, unless otherwise stated on deadline card.

D. TERMS: Cash with copy only. All advertisers must provide information for the confidential use of the publisher should questions arise.

E. CONTRACT RATES are available for 6, 13, 26, or 52 consecutive issues. Contract rates apply to fulfillment of contract items. Cancellation of a contract by the advertiser allows the publisher to reinvoice covered ads at the earned rate. This rate card is a part of the advertising contract.

F. MINORS are required to furnish a statement of responsibility from their parent or guardian before their advertising can be accepted.

G. ERRORS: Typewritten copy is recommended. The publisher is not responsible for errors resulting from long-hand or illegible copy, or changes submitted by telephone. The publisher's liability for any error shall not exceed the cost of the space occupied by that error.

H. LAYOUT and design services are provided by Krause Publications for advertisers who do not submit camera-ready copy. Due to the creative and subjective nature of these services, credit will not be allowed for conceptual variations.

I. GRADING: Items offered in any ad must be properly described as to condition, conforming to the standards set forth in Comics Buyer's Guide Price Guide. Advertisers may also exercise the option of grading offerings by applying a unique personal system, providing the standards applied are detailed in the ad to avoid confusion.

J. RETURN PRIVILEGE: Except as otherwise specified in any ad, an advertiser must accept the return of any merchandise postmarked within ten working days of its receipt by a customer.

K. P.O. BOX ADS are allowed, but the permanent home address, phone number and place of business of the advertiser must be filed with the publisher before advertisements may be printed.

L. SPECIAL PAGE POSITIONS are available at a premium, inquire for details.

M. ADVERTISING AGENCIES: There are no agency discounts.

N. CAMERA READY display ads qualify for a 15% discount. Copy must be ready for camera without additional paste-up or film work required. No charge for reproductions, enlargements or mail response key change. Classified Display, Comics Trader, Collector's Showcase and classified word ads do not qualify for the camera ready discount.

O. SPACE RESERVATIONS available for camera ready ads only. Must be made prior to ad deadline. Reserved space must be paid for even if ad does not arrive on time.

P. PRE-PRINTED INSERTS are available in Comics Buyer's Guide. Inquire for additional information and technical specifications.

Q. CIRCULATION is throughout the United States and Canada by subscription and single copy sales by agents in shops and other outlets.

R. PROOF OF PUBLICATION: Tear sheets of new display ads are mailed to those advertisers requesting this service. We regret we cannot provide this service to classified advertisers.

S. NOTE: All advertising orders are accepted subject to the terms and provisions of the current rate card. Krause Publications, Inc. reserves the right to decline advertising or suspend advertising privileges for such periods of time as in its discretion it sees fit, for any reason, whatsoever, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such declination or suspension. The forwarding of an order is construed as acceptance of all rates and conditions in effect at the time the advertising is submitted. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions, printed or otherwise, appearing on any order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions which conflict with its policies. Advertisers and advertising agencies assume liability for all content (including text representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assumes responsibility for any claims arising therefrom made against the publisher. It is the advertiser's or agency's responsibility to obtain appropriate releases on any item or individual pictured in their advertising. All agreements are subject to strikes, accidents, acts of God, or other contingencies beyond the publisher's control. The publisher reserves the right to edit any advertising copy to conform with its standard advertising policies, and to reject any ad which in its opinion is unethical or objectional for any reason.

Back when Image Comics first started, I expressed the opinion in these pages that I felt, personally, a little disappointed over the choice of super-heroes for the subject matter of the line. My point (and, as Ellen DeGeneres says, I do have one) was that other comics creators had broken away from Marvel and DC to produce comics that were wildly different from the norm of "The Big Two." I felt an opportunity was being missed to expand the horizons of comic-book readers who thought that guys in tights were the be-all/end-all of what comics could provide.

This sentiment was attributed with all sorts of misinterpretations and (naturally) evil ulterior motives, when all it was was one dope with a column saying, in essence, "Gee, I'd just liked to have seen something different, that's all."

One of the first Image creators to butt heads with me over my opinions was Jim Valentino, creator of Shadowhawk. This, combined with my disemboweling of Rob Liefeld a year or so later over the concept of credit, led to some ill feelings. But time has passed. Feelings have cooled. Image continues. Obviously critical comments of mine caused such creations as Spawn to vanish into obscurity, and the attendant creators to spiral into bankruptcy and oblivion.

And in the meantime Image is now producing stuff that's different from the super-hero norm — which is all I was asking for in the first place. In the forefront of that movement is the same Valentino with whom I butted heads years ago (well, not exactly the same: He's lost some weight, gotten a haircut, and looks pretty sharp, ladies.) And I figure I owe it to him to take a look at his marvelous series, A Touch of Silver, of which Jim has sent me the first three complete issues plus photocopies of issues four and five, which are in various stages of completion. I don't usually do comic-book reviews in this column, leaving that in the realm of Maggie Thompson or Tony Isabella.

But I reason that I owe it for two reasons: First, since I was the one opening my big yap about Image creators doing something other than guys in tights, I feel some obligation to play it up, since it's actually being done. And second, I tortured Jim's assistant.

Not whips and chains or racks or thumbscrews or anything like that. Just — harassed the poor woman. Just a little. Just for fun.

The unfortunate female called me in my sanctum one day, endeavoring to get my address so that she could send me the package of material. I answered the phone and she said, "Hello, I'm calling from Shadowline Studios. I'm calling for Jim Valentino."

And without hesitation, I said, "I'm sorry. Jim Valentino's not here."

She paused a moment. I think she was trying to determine whether I was kidding or just stupid (keep in mind that one doesn't preclude the other.) Then she said, "I know he's not there."

And adopting my best paranoid tone — which is not all that far removed from my normal speech pattern — "Well, if you know he's not here, why did you call?"

She laughed at that, and I knew we were on the same wavelength, so I ratcheted up the performance level and started shrieking, "You're one of them, aren't you! Calling me day and night, harassing me, asking for other people! What kind of sick, twisted game is this? Why won't you leave me alone?"

At which point she was laughing louder, in a manner that indicated that either she really thought I was funny or she was figuring that she'd better play along, in case I turned violent and showed up on their doorstep with an Uzi and an attitude. So I dropped the act, we chatted, and she sent me the stuff.

And I'm glad she did, because it's trés nifty. (Use that for a pull quote, Jim, I dare you. "Trés nifty!" says Peter David of But I Digress.)

(Actually, I do this kind of thing to phone solicitors all the time. And they never get it that I'm joking. Citibank reps in particular are good targets for this. They call me up, say, "Hello, I'm calling for Citibank," and I'll reply, "I'm sorry, Citibank isn't here."

They don't laugh. They just switch emphasis. "No, I'm calling for Citibank." And I'll say, "Look, I already told you, Citibank isn't here."

At which point they'll usually say, "I'll call back," and hang up. Which is fine by me. But I digress.)

A Touch of Silver chronicles the life of a young boy by the name of Tim Silver, beginning with the slow disintegration of his life in October 1962. "Tim" of course rhymes with "Jim," making one wonder how much, if any, autobiographical viewpoint we're getting here (a problem that never arises when your name is Peter.) Set in Westminster, Calif., we experience Tim's life with a sense of very real identification. Consequently, Tim's story, his environment, has resonance for us because many of us have been in the same mindset as he.

For Tim is a comic-book fan, you see. Moreover, he is the classic comic-book fan. Small, uncertain, unpopular, seeing the world as a place where parents and bullies hold all the power. The only place where Tim can find escape is the realm of comic books, where virtue guarantees eventual triumph. Where heroes can leave unpleasant circumstances simply by vaulting skyward, and nobody messes with them except supervillains, who invariably get trashed anyway.

What's particularly attractive is the subjective manner in which Valentino as writer and artist — ably abetted by the lettering of Tami Doll (a name which cries out for a 1950s doo-wop song all its own) — puts across the subjective manner in which Tim views the world. Or, if you want to take it a step beyond that, how an adult Tim recalling his childhood might give emphasis to certain aspects of his life.

Adults, for example, when getting particularly strident, switch from standard word balloons to big open block lettering. His mother and father, when getting particularly irate, go from Valentino's stylistic norm to wild-eyed, slavering caricatures that look like something that wandered in from a Peter Bagge comic. It makes sense from a child's perspective: Who among us doesn't remember being screamed at by a parent whose open and shouting mouth seemed suddenly to constitute about three quarters of the face?

His time in school is depicted in panels that have ziptones, scratch marks and such that obscure them — indicating either that one day of blah school experience tends to blend into the next and the next, shapeless and indistinguishable — or, equally possible (particularly since the same motif occurs during a birthday party for Tim to which virtually no one comes), it's as if Tim is there in body, but not in mind. Tim, whose interest in writing and drawing his own comics quickly becomes one of the series' focal points, withdraws from situations which he finds tedious or unpleasant, his mind awhirl with various half-formed images that will eventually coalesce into stories of — naturally — super-heroes. Stories that will help him escape from the tedium and unpleasantness of his life.

Artistic touches and subjective riffs aside, the first three issues of Silver stick safely to territory that's been covered by everyone from Leave it to Beaver to Jean Shepherd. There are hints dropped that all is not well in Silver land: His parents' marriage is troubled, his father is shown in a dalliance with another woman and later making efforts to placate Tim's mother by spending more quality time with his kids.

But most of the tale stays safely within Tim's immediate sphere of influence, and touches on all the childhood fears and difficulties which lend a commonality to growing up — particularly growing up a comics fans. Issue #1 focuses on the aforementioned disastrous birthday party. Issue #2 has Tim's first, tentative experience with the opposite sex (it doesn't get any easier, kid.) And #3 puts Tim in conflict with the school bully. This one had particular identification value for me, because Tim uses stunts he picked up from reading comic books to take down the bully, as did I when I faced off against the school thug back in fifth grade.

In short, the stories are nicely constructed, well told, and emotionally appealing. Hardly groundbreaking, though. With an adult voiceover narration and a bit more whimsy, you'd have credible episodes of The Wonder Years.

But beginning with issue #4, we see Valentino's true vision for the series. Having laid the groundwork for Tim Silver's life in the first three issues, Valentino then tears the kid's life completely apart. The previously established cracks suddenly rip apart — almost without warning — into full-blown crevices, as the Silver parents' marriage turns into a domestic Vesuvius.

The first rule of a splintering marriage is: Keep the kids out of it whenever possible. In the early parts of the issue, we see the devastating effect that parental bickering has upon children. Tim, old enough to understand, tries to find solace within his comics, pencilling a fight scene in which assorted heroes slug it out with the hideous Daddy monster. Tim's younger sister, meantime, is in quiet denial, playing tea party with her dolls and complaining about the "rude and uncouth" neighbors. You just know this kid's got "therapy" writ large in her future. Like kids growing up in a
